WIFE WITNESSES MISHAP

Auto Plunges Into Victim as He Opens Garage; Says He Left Car In Gear.

Pinned against the wall of his garage last night by his own car, J. Robert Darling, 33, junior partner in the firm of R. O. Darling and Son, Mansfield contractors, suffered internal injuries which caused his death at 2:35 a. m. today in General hospital.

Darling had opened the garage doors at his home at 374 Overlook road when the car suddenly lurched forward, crushing him against the back wall and a power mower in the building. The accident occurred about 9:30 p. m. as the family returned from a visit with relatives in another part of the city

Mrs. Darling and the couple's daughter, Barbara Ann, 8, were in the front seat of the car and suffered minor cuts and bruises when they were thrown against the dashboard and windshield. Mrs. Darling was so grief-stricken that she was unable to explain how the accident occurred. Police were not called in the case.

One of the first neighbors to arrive at the accident scene was Ralph Schad, jr., 371 Shepard road, who said he found Darling crumpled against the garage wall, still conscious The injured man did not lose consciousness until about 10 minutes before his death, his physician said Members of the family were at the hospital when he died

On the way to the hospital in an ambulance, Schad said Darling told him he had left the car in gear when he got out to open the garage doors and assumed blame for the accident. The car was equipped with a hydromatic gear shift.

Mrs. Darling apparently was trying to move over into the driver's seat when the accelerator was Governor Tells Colleges To Beware Of Subsidies.

DELAWARE — (AP) — Asserting that colleges were becoming increasingly dependent on federal contracts, Gov. John W. Bricker told Ohio Wesleyan university's graduating class the American educational system must avoid a "national strait-jacket."

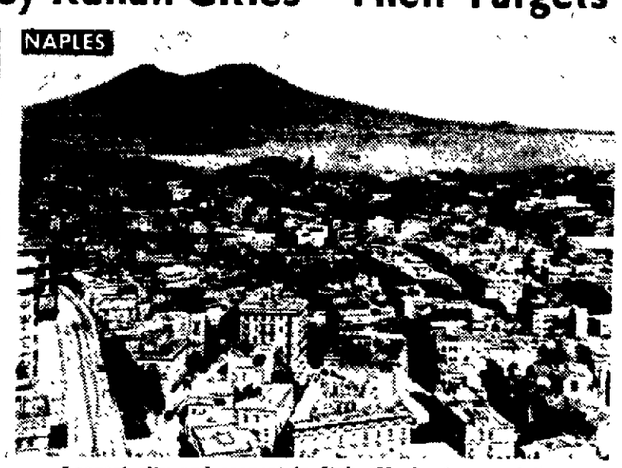
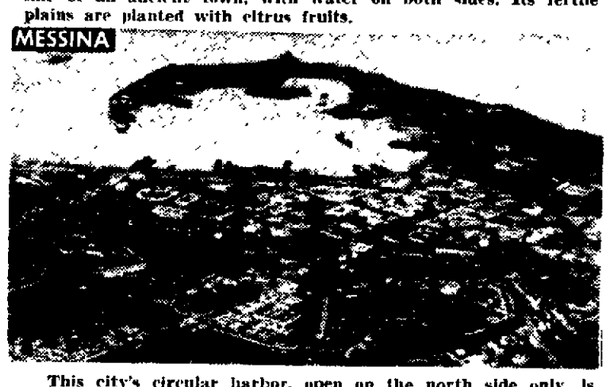
Here's Bomber-Eye View Of Key Italian Cities---Their Targets

At the northern tip of Sicily, Palermo, population 411,879, stands on a small bay. The original city was built on a tongue of land between two inlets of sea. The present main street is the line of an ancient town, with water on both sides. Its fertile plains are planted with citrus fruits.



Largest city and seaport in Italy, Naples is one of the most important manufacturing centers in the country. Its main industries are ship-building, steel manufacture, construction of locomotives and engines. Naples has a population of 865,913, was founded in 1,000 B. C.



This city's circular harbor, open on the north side only, is formed by a strip of land curved like a sickle, which gave the city its name. Messina, which is on Sicily, was the last city taken from the Bourbons and made a part of the United Italy under King Victor Emmanuel. Messina's population is 192,051.

The strategic importance of the seaport and naval base of Taranto has been recognized since 1860. It was bombed heavily by RAF in 1940. Taranto, population 117,722, extends one and a half miles along the coast of the Mar Piccolo, and has wide receiving docks and anchorages for warships.

MEMORIAL DAY TRIBUTE PAID IN 2 PROGRAMS

Rev. Swoyer, Louis Bromfield Call For Preservation of Freedom, Democracy.

CROWDS AT SERVICES

Parade, Cemetery Exercises, Program at Lake Highlight Day's Observance.

By WALLY DAVIS

Mansfield's sons and daughters who answered the call to the colors in past wars and those in the present conflict were honored yesterday at impressive Memorial day services at Mansfield cemetery and Charles Mill lake.

Hundreds gathered at the Marine memorial service held at Charles Mill in the morning and thousands of others saw the annual Memorial day parade and attended the afternoon exercises at the Mansfield cemetery stadium.

"We are fighting a foe that has no respect for God or the rights of man," Rev. Grover E. Swoyer, pastor of First Lutheran church, said in the address at the cemetery program.

"Here in America we are free to attend the church of our choice. We are free to speak what we believe is true. We read the newspapers and listen to the radio with the realization that we are being told the truth.

"We could not gather here today to honor our soldiers if we were living in Axis held countries."

He went on to say that "If there is anything this war has taught us, it is that we need God. I believe there are two things essential if we are to maintain our great principles of freedom and democracy. Those are freedom of speech and thought, and freedom of worship."

The program opened with Rev. Paul H. Saleste, pastor of St John's Evangelical church, bringing the invocation. This was followed by the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner" by the entire audience. A high spot of the program was Dimon Herring's presentation of Lincoln's Gettysburg address.

Legionnaire Thomas D. Brown read the list of the soldiers who lost their lives in the Civil, Spanish-American, World war I, and the present war Mrs. Della M.

150 U. S. Planes Turn Airfields To Smoky Ruins

Fortresses, Liberators Leave Trail Of Explosion And Fire In Twin Thrust At Italian Bases; 14 Enemy Aircraft Lost.

LONDON—(INS)—Mounting indications that the grand Allied offensive against the Axis will assume a global rather than purely European shape and form were seen today in announcement that Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell has arrived in England.

ALLIED HEADQUARTEDS IN NORTH AFRICA—More than 150 U. S. four-engined bombers, cooperating in twin attacks against air bases in southern Italy, blasted Naples and Foggia by daylight Sunday and left smoke-shrouded ruins in their wake, it was announced today.

Explosions and fires raged at Naples, hit by a force of more than 100 B-7 Flying Fortresses of the North African command. More than 50 B-24 Liberator bombers of the Ninth U. S. air force struck from Middle East bases at the airdrome of Foggia, 80 miles northeast of Naples.

These were the major forays of a day which included renewed attacks upon Sardinia, potential stepping stone of invasion, and Pantelleria, the battered Italian bastion in the Sicilian straits.

The Flying Fortresses shattered important war targets and destroyed 10 enemy fighters in the brisling raid on Naples, from which every bomber returned safely. The Americans made a four-fanged attack on southern Italy's biggest defense center.

In Naples harbor a 320-foot merchant vessel was sunk. A 150-foot tanker was set afire and another ship, 185 feet long, was damaged. The roundhouse and locomotive repair shop were hit and two oil storage tanks were exploded.

The Fortresses also dumped explosives on an assembly plant, machine shops and hangars of the airplane factory in suburban Pompigliano and struck at the big Naples airdrome of Capodichino, where from 30 to 50 planes, mostly German, attempted to beat off the raiders.

Some enmy pilots, flying high above machine-gun range, tried aerial bombing of the Fortresses, but this now familiar tactic also failed.

Eight fires blazed in the field area and the headquarters building and other sectors were damaged by hits, it was announced.

Aerial photographs show many grounded aircraft were damaged by the blanket bombing at Capodichino, but officials released no figures on the total.

The gaunt skeletons of several wrecked six-engined Merseburg-323 transports littered the Pomigliano landing ground as departing Fortresses photographed the scene over this target.

Ports, railway communications and other targets were smashed in raids on Sardinia, it was announced

The Naples raid was coupled with an attack by a strong force of United States army heavy bombers that roared in Sunday

WASHINGTON—The threat of a work stoppage at midnight tonight hung over the nation's soft coal fields today as representatives of the United Mine Workers and the bituminous operators met again to discuss portal-to-portal pay and other issues in their contract negotiations.

Labor circles believed that UMW President John L. Lewis might extend the truce once more if the negotiations show signs of progress. Thus far, however, little headway seems to have been made since the 15 Companies Battle Blaze That Destroys 3 Plants.

SEATTLE, Wash.—(AP)—A fire which destroyed three industrial plants in Seattle's south end was brought under control today after 12 engine companies, three truck companies, a city fire department fire boat and two coast guard barges battled the blaze for nearly three hours.

Two of the plants were war industries.

Organize Summer Playground Program; Volunteers To Serve

Believed an essential part of the home front war effort, a summer playground program with volunteers serving as recreation supervisors was in the making today for Mansfield children.

Volunteer organizations have already been perfected for three play centers and there will be others organized as soon as a sufficient number of volunteers are obtained for establishing them.

Pushing the program is Floyd F. Dent, Mansfield Boy Scout executive, and interested in the movement is the Mansfield War Chest which is expected to consider soon an application for a $2,000 fund for operating expenses.

Housewives in the immediate vicinities of Liberty, Prospect and Johns parks have already volunteered their services to make the summer playground program a success. Each woman will be responsible for half a day's program a week and it is Dent's plan to use some of the operating fund to hire a coordinator to set up definite programs for each day.

The need for such a program multiplied by the needs for mothers work at defense jobs brought many inquiries about the playgrounds to Dent and members of the Council of Community Fund Agencies also interested in the program.

Definite steps to organize volunteer workers were taken by the park committee headed by Harry Bowman of the Mansfield Parks association and including Emil Eisen representing Liberty park, Claude Zediker, Prospect park, Carl Stough, Johns park and Paul Stehl, Hedges and John Todd parks.

2-INCH RAIN POURS ON CITY

Two Storms Flood Streets and Subway; Elyria Hit By Big Rain; Crops Damaged.

Two violent downpours of rain in Mansfield and Richland county last night and early today disrupted farming operations and flooded streets, beside giving a damp and dismal atmosphere to the two-day Memorial day holiday.

Following on the heels of a rainy spell earlier in the month, the forced delay in farm work seemed likely to prove costly, since crops are already far behind their normal status.

A total of 1.93 inches of rain fell in Mansfield in the two storms, the first of which struck about 6 p. m., and the second at 2 a. m., according to Weather Observer Albert Sprunger.

It was the heaviest downpour Mansfield has had since Aug. 28, 1942. It brought May's total rainfall to 8.65 inches, greatest for that month in 18 years.

The Park avenue subway was flooded so deep that it was impassable for about an hour last night, and several state roads in the vicinity were completely under water.

Cash And Jewelry Stolen At Home Of Empire President

Burglars obtained $200 in cash, a wrist watch, and at least three pieces of jewelry at the home of James M. Hill, president of the Empire Sheet and Tin Plate company, after ransacking the house at 240 Park avenue west, it was reported Sunday to police.

Mr. and Mrs. Hill discovered the burglary when they returned home yesterday afternoon following a 12-day absence. Police said the burglars entered the home by prying open a kitchen window. Contents of desks and drawers were strewn about the house, and Hill said a further check of the house might reveal other articles were missing.

Jewelry taken from the home included a three-strand imitation pearl necklace, a rhinestone bracelet and earrings. There was no estimate of their value.

Officers linked the burglary with a series of break-ins at business places, private homes, and park pavilions in the city area in the past month.

Two Inmates Escape During Rainstorm Sunday.

Two youthful Mansfield reformatory inmates who fled from the institutions' dairy barn during a rainstorm at 6:20 p. m. Sunday were sought today by authorities throughout the state.

The fugitives are William Snodgrass, 18, and Albert Lunsford, 20, both sentenced for automobile theft.

A posse of reformatory guards searched the water-soaked area around the institution most of the night without finding a trace of the pair.

Snodgrass entered the reformatory Feb. 5, 1942, from Columbiana county to serve until he becomes of age. Lunsford, whose home was said to be have been in Tennessee, was sentenced Nov. 19, 1942, from Cincinnati, under a one-to-20-year term.

'Know Self, World And God', Advice Left With Graduates

Know thyself, thy world and thy God.

That was the advice given the 286 members of the Mansfield Senior high school graduating class last night by Rev. B. F. Hagelbarger, pastor of First Christian church, at baccalaureate services at First Lutheran church.

With the graduates seated in front of the auditorium and parents and friends filling the auditorium behind them, Rev. Hagelbarger spoke on the subject, "Marks of an Educated Man."

"A former president of Harvard university," he said, "once made the statement that education is the ability to know the right thing to do in every situation and to do it. How great this world would be if every man could say his education was based on this point."

The speaker also impressed upon the graduates the importance of personality to the educated man. "Personality," he said, 'i's like a great empire It is entrusted to us to develop and explore."

"The well educated man must be able to meet people and make

UNITED: De Gaulle, Giraud Set Up New French Rule At Algiers

ALGIERS — (AP) — A seven-man executive committee was set up today under the joint presidency of Gen. Charles De Gaulle and Gen. Henri Giraud to govern liberated Frenchmen and French territory and to direct the French war effort until their homeland is freed.

The members, in addition to De Gaulle and Giraud, are Rene Massigli and Andre Philipe, who were designated by De Gaulle; Gen. Alphonse Georges and Jean Monnet who were named by Giraud; and Gen. Georges Catroux, who was accepted by both.

Two places were left vacant and perhaps they will be filled by leaders who may arrive in the future.

All those on the committee assembled in a secret place in Algiers. In effect the committee created itself and, while the meeting started only as a session of a group of men, it ended as the assembly of France's new governing body.

Catroux, high commissioner for Syria, is a five-star general who served as liaison officer between De Gaulle and Giraud in preliminary negotiations for unity.

Georges, the western front commander of French armies before the fall of France, arrived in Algiers only recently from France.

Massigli was Fighting French foreign commissioner.

Philipe was Fighting French commissioner for interior and labor.

Monnet is a French financial expert

VICTORY: Stars And Stripes Fly Over Attu, Japs Wiped Out

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — The battle of Attu is over, and the Stars and Stripes once again fly over the barren but strategically important little island at the western end of the Aleutians.

Scattered snipers and possibly a few isolated machine gun nests are all that remain to oppose United States troops who freed from invaders the first American soil to be recaptured in this war and started the northern route march toward Tokyo.

The loss of Attu, which has been conceded by the Japanese, leaves the enemy garrison on Kiska virtually cut off.

A battle in which American troops struck with guns, bayonets, rifle-butts fists, and knives marked the end of the 20-day campaign

"It was the biggest battle on Attu," said a navy spokesman in reporting annihilation of the last large enemy force on the island.

"The Attu battle is won," declared Col. R. Ernest Dupuy, chief of the war department's news division. He gave no details in his weekly broadcast review of war news.

Japan broadcast a communique telling of a "final blow against the enemy main force." In that battle, the enemy broadcast asserted "it is thought that the entire number of our force has completely perished."

A subsequent Tokyo broadcast, seeking to idealize the defeat, an-

That New York exposition's "World of Tomorrow" was nothing like this.

Distribution of meat is said to be a tough problem—and the adjective seems equally applicable to some of the meat.

"Warmer and cooler," said a recent weather forecast—indicating that a politician might be trying his hand in the weather bureau.

Prison for 'Numbers' Racketeers

WHETHER operators and agents engaged in the lucrative numbers racket will be seriously impressed by a new law, which will drastically increase penalties for this offense, including prison sentence, will not become known until some idea is gained as to what will be done about enforcement.

The legislature finally passed the bill, after several attempts to smother it, and was careful to place a line of demarcation between games of chance operated for personal profit, and those conducted for "religious, charitable or educational purposes."

Whatever the outcome, this action by the legislature at least indicates that lawmakers have become informed as to the extent of growth of the vicious numbers racket over the state and the vast amount of money being drained from legitimate channels of trade into this illegal activity.

Need for additional laws to penalize professional gamblers is questionable, as it has been laxity of enforcement rather than lack of laws that permitted various forms of commercialized gambling to operate in Mansfield and other cities.

Some will recall that twenty years ago, Vic Donahey, then governor, issued an order to city and county officials to enforce gambling laws in their communities, and this was effective—for a little while—in cutting down on commercialized gambling operations. But state, county and city law enforcement officials, in the main, are subjected to more pressure from gambling interests than they are from law abiding citizens, and are therefore inclined to ignore anti-gambling laws as much as possible.

It will be interesting to watch procedure under the new law—which can be made as effective, or as ineffective, as the governor and other law enforcement officials desire.

Russia Retains Communism

BELIEF is being expressed by some people that Russia's action in ending the comintern means that communism has been abandoned as a political faith in that country. There is nothing to support this belief. All the announcement meant was that Russia will no longer urge communism on other countries. The comintern was the great proselyting agency.

Stalin himself was never very much interested in what happened to governments outside Russia. The improvement of Russia herself, so that her citizens might be better fed, clothed, housed and educated, has been his great concern. In this he differed from Leon Trotsky, who wanted to communize the world. Under Stalin, interest in the comintern lessened. The war made Russian interest center on life itself. So the comintern has been dying a natural death for years. All Stalin did was to announce the death officially.

Russia inside its borders seems to be working toward some kind of democratic government. Russians like the communistic idea, especially in the collective ownership of farms, but their economy becomes more capitalistic as the years go on. The announcement makes no change in Russian life or policy. It merely takes formal notice of a condition which has been growing for some time, and seems to pledge the end of proselyting.

World War Veterans as Guards

CANADA has evolved a sensible way of guarding war prisoners within her borders. She has established a "Veterans Guard," composed of men who served in World War I. These elder soldiers, trained long ago in the regular routines, are fitted to go on duty with only a little refresher training. They release younger men for service abroad.

Recruiting officers of the Veterans Guard are urging men who could leave their farms or small businesses to their wives, fathers and younger ones, to join it and thus help their country. They are told that the financial set-up is generous, with leaves and personal care assured.

The United States has never had foreign prisoners in such numbers as are now coming, and no foreign prisoners at all for many years. People have naturally been wondering how they could be taken care of. The abandoned buildings of the CCC have been suggested, and might well be so used.

Outdoor work improving the public domain seems an appropriate occupation for war prisoners.

Admirable Traits of Airmen

THERE seems to be something about flying that brings out a man's best qualities. Ace fliers, who have most to brag about, are nearly always quite modest. Captain Philip W. Porter, writing from North Africa, says there's no truth at all in the cocky and careless manner, the flair for flashy dress, the sophisticated air, and so on, that are supposed to characterize the air men. They nearly always disclaim credit for anything remarkable that they have done. Of one famous outfit he says:

"Every time these boys go up into battle, they do something spectacular. Courage and heroism are taken for granted. Narrow squeaks are routine—and death comes often. But to hear them talk, their individual performances are nothing. I wish more Americans could see them and model after them."

Exceeding 'Normal Capacity'

A READER wrote to the New York Times criticizing the statement that a steel mill "operated at 102 per cent of capacity."

There is a tendency, perhaps, to use percentages rather loosely. A writer says a mill does 150 per cent of the work it did last year. Someone picks that up without thinking and says the mill shows a gain of 150 per cent, which is quite a different matter.

Perhaps the 102 per cent in this case should have been stated more accurately as 102 per cent "of normal capacity." Whatever the mathematical statistics, it is easy to see that normal capacities may mean little to men who have sons and brothers in the South Pacific.

A SALUTE TO OUR TREASURED MEMORIES

Wire-Tapping Becoming Rampant

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — There is no such thing as a "private life" for a Washington government worker any more.

A co-worker, who probably is closer to government employes than any one else in the Capital, told me there now are more than 20 investigating agencies prying into the private lives and pasts of almost every one working for Uncle Sam.

A government official, and I can't mention even the agency, tells me that there is more wire-tapping in Washington today than there was in the whole United States a year or so ago.

The FBI and Secret Service do only a small percentage of the prodding into the lives of federal employes. They gather finger-prints (all of which go into the vast FBI files), make superficial queries into past activities, etc. But it is the other investigating agencies that do the real snooping into minor details.

JUST what departments, agencies, and bureaus have their own investigating branches is hard to uncover. Most of them deny that their work is any more than an inquiry into the fitness of individuals for the jobs to which they are assigned. Civil Service makes no bones about the fact that it investigates applicants thoroughly. The Treasury department also makes no effort to hide its investigations. Employes in the White House, the Bureau of Standards, the Bureau of Engraving, the FBI, Secret Service, the Capitol Police, and several other agencies are given such a thorough going-over that there is only the slightest chance that any phoney could slip into jobs there.

These and several other agencies where information of military value is handled are perfectly justified in assembling thorough dossiers on every person who works for them. But why several congressional committees and such agencies as the Public Buildings administration have to blanket investigations that already have been made is a mystery.

PBA, for example, is charged with the safety of all government buildings. Thus it feels called upon to require each agency to certify that all employes are loyal tillers in Uncle Sam's vineyard. Otherwise, they have to be investigated.

THIS duplication of investigations is getting to be one of Washington's big jokes. One federal worker (serving his twelfth year with Uncle Sam) told me the other day that he has been investigated by three separate agencies in the last four months. Four times in the last year I have been queried by investigators on government workers who live in my apartment building, but not one of whom I had met or even heard of.

When one realizes that the number of federal workers, over all, now is in the neighborhood of 3,000,000, the magnitude of the investigatory task becomes apparent.

Just why a single agency hasn't been set up to clear these federal workers as they come into their jobs and possibly keep an eye on them later, is a question that even Rep. Robert Ramspeck, who knows more about federal employment than almost any one else in Washington, hasn't answered.

Some officials are convinced that unless something is done about it soon, we will shortly have a Gestapo situation where investigators have to be employed to investigate the investigators.

Sorrow is better than laughter; for by the sadness of the countenance the heart is made better.—Eccles. 7:3.

Listen World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Clogged Spark Plugs

WE KNOW so little about ourselves—and suffer such needless misery because of our ignorance!

The most stupid of us can understand the mechanism of an automobile or sewing machine. But when it comes to our own thoughts and feelings we're as much in the dark as our cavemen granddads. It doesn't even occur to us that we, too, are machines, and that it's possible to know what makes our own wheels go round.

Yet we are—and it is. . . . And love and hate, joy and sorrow, desire or indifference are as surely mechanical reactions as the piston's plunge.

Here's Mary, for example, badly worried. Everything's wrong, and she doesn't know why. She's living miserably, as so many of us are nowadays. All higgeldy-piggeldy-seven relations huddled in a shabby apartment designed to house three. No quietness or privacy. A constant racket. Everyone worried, irritable.

Mary's working. Not much of a job, but she could manage if she didn't feel so ill all the time. Yet the doctor can't find any ailment. She's "just dead inside." As if she'd never feel anything again. Once she was gay, lively. Now—nothing matters.

"It's the queerest thing!" she cries. No matter what happens—I can't care. I go ahead acting as if I did, but really I don't feel anything at all. Only this dreadful numbness. When I smile it might as well be painted on my face. And I have to pretend to be shocked or sad, for I'm really not. It's awful. Do people get like this? Won't I ever feel anything again?"

Wondered that yourself—haven't you? Gone through the endless blankness of sleepwalking days, wondering if you should ever come to life again inside? Yet you'd understand the condition instantly if you saw it happening in an automobile.

If spark plugs miss fire, you know they're clogged and that it's useless to expect more action until they are cleaned.

But emotions are as plainly mechanical reactions as the sparking of your auto plugs. There is, of course, more than mere chemistry involved—some higher dynamics which we do not as yet understand. But it all runs by rule as surely as the simplest gadget.

THERE are endless things which we don't yet understand about our emotions. But this we do know—the glands — many glands all over the body—are the mechanical source of our feelings. They are literally our emotional spark plugs. And you can't get action out of them any more than you can out of your automobile, if you break the rules.

And the deepest necessity for any human machine is—privacy. Not moping isolation, but some decent measure of silence and solitude. Noise and worry, vulgarity and fear will clog spiritual and mental plugs as surely as carbon and oil will clog the plugs in your car. And with the same result—NO ACTION.

Get away from it all, if only for half an hour a day! Find some place where you can be absolutely still . . . where you can forget everything including yourself.

Do that—and you needn't worry. Life will take care of the rest. You were meant to feel . . . to feel vividly! abundantly . . . and nothing but your own careless stupidity can stop you feeling.

Timely Editorial

No Grade Labeling.

The OPA has done well to abandon its arbitrary and unworkable plan to require grade labeling of the 1943 pack of canned fruits and vegetables.

Perhaps at some time in the future—although this is still a hotly debated issue—such a requirement may become feasible and desirable.

But certainly it would have been silly in the extreme to force canners to throw away millions of labels already printed and hold up food production and distribution while new ones, conforming to the ruling, were manufactured. Paper, ink and man hours would have been wasted. The flow of food to the country's consumers to our armed forces and to our lease-lend beneficiaries would have been interrupted.

Once again a bureaucratic reformer's dream has collided with the hard realities of a situation. This time, for a novel and gratifying change, the dream was abandoned before any damage could be done.—Columbus Dispatch.

Roosevelt Charm Induced Brown To Become Price Administrator

WASHINGTON—Here is the inside story of how Prentiss Brown, much against his will, got himself catapulted from the relative peace of the U. S. senate into the vituperative turmoil of the OPA.

After Brown's defeat as senator from Michigan, Senator Robert Wagner of New York wrote to the president urging that Brown's experience be used in the interest of the country. The next day Wagner received a reply from the White House: "I agree with you completely. Nuff said—FDR."

Meantime, Marriner Eccles had tempted Brown with a job on the Federal Reserve Board. It carried a ten-year term, and Brown was delighted with the prospect of serving in his special field—money and banking—and being spared the grief of political controversies.

On the day the president sent for him, Prentiss Brown encountered his friend Senator Wagner.

"I have heard," said Brown, "that the president wants me to take Henderson's OPA job. But the Federal Reserve looks better to me. There's too much grief in the OPA," Brown said stoutly. "And I just won't take it."

Wagner smiled. "I warn you, Prentiss. Look out for that guy. He'll charm you into it."

Next morning, Senator Wagner and the American public read of Brown's appointment to the job of OPA administrator. The president had turned on the charm.

Cox and Congress.

ON MAY 21, 1906 Senator Joseph Ralph Burton of Kansas was told by the U. S. Supreme Court that he would have to spend six months in jail, pay a fine of $2,500 and never again hold a public office.

He had been convicted of accepting money for using his influence before a branch of the federal government. Specifically, he had accepted $2,500 from the Rialto Grain and Securities company of St. Louis which was barred from use of the mails. Senator Burton tried to persuade the postoffice department not to bar the Rialto company, and accepted money for his influence.

The case was fought for two years up to the U. S. Supreme Court, which handed down a ringing decision that members of congress cannot accept "pecuniary reward."

That was in 1906. Nearly forty years have passed since then. The same law remains on the statute books. But otherwise things have changed. Among other things, congress seems to have lost its sense of smell. Something which smelled bad in 1906, seems to smell pure and sweet in 1943, in fact so sweet that it deserves reward.

Gene Cox Rewarded.

THAT, in effect, is what has happened to a present member of congress, Eugene Cox of Georgia, who received a check for $2,500 from radio station WALB, Albany, Georgia, for helping it with the Federal Communications Commission.

Although Assistant Attorney General Berge, in chrage of the justice department's criminal division, recommended prosecution, Cox's congressional colleagues have rewarded him in an unusual manner.

They have placed him in charge of a committee to investigate the Federal Communications Commission which brought the first charges against him.

Furthermore, Cox, as chairman of this investigating committee has coralled a weird assortment of administration enemies to help him investigate. It looks as if he were out, not only to smear the Federal Communications Commission, which had the audacity to bring charges against him, but indirectly by the president as well.

Cox's Sleuths.

A GLANCE at Cox's roster of investigators is revealing. Behind them appear to be the Liberty league, certain Republican influences, and even Jim Farley. Here are some of them:

Three associates of Jim Bennett, former N. Y. attorney general whom Farley nominated for governor in a bitter fight against FDR. They are: Hugh Reilly, chief of litigation bureau of the N. Y. department of law; Edward G. Griffin, ex-deputy attorney general of N. Y.; Ambrose V. McCall, ex-assistant attorney general of N. Y.

Fred R. Walker—Detroit Republican who defended Republican national committeeman Frank McKay when he was charged with mail frauds.

Robert B. Baker—ex-senior investigator for the Dies committee.

William Larson—formerly on the "goon squad" of Fisher Body.

But the most important of all is the committee's chief counsel—Eugene L. Garey, Wall Street lawyer friend of Jim Farley and Al Smith. Garey's law partner Roaul B. Desvernine was a member of the Liberty League, and his law clients include several firms suspended from the New York Stock Exchange.

In appointing Garey to the job, Cox announced that he was "a close friend of Jim Farley" and indicated that Farley had recommended him for the job. Cox himself has come out for Farley for president in 1944.

Meanwhile the Cox probe of the agency which dared believe that the Supreme Court's 1906 dictum regarding the conduct of congressmen should still apply in 1943 continue in such a high-handed manner that FCC Commissioner Cliff Durr has refused to testify. He has pointed out that the hearings are closed door sessions with no member of the house committee present except Cox and no transcript of testimony shown to witnesses afterward.

If other witnesses follow Durr's example, the whole thing may go up to the Supreme Court once again to test out the entire question of the ethics of a congressman in taking "legal expenses."

Prudence Enlists.

THE KIND of "pies Mother used to bake" soon will be on the menu of army and navy mess halls.

Also, bean soup without a single bean, and bacon without a strip of lean soon should be a thing of the past. For the government has hired no less an authority than Prudence Penny, noted cooking expert of the radio and screen, to supervise the diet of army and navy men.

Miss Penny will do a series of instructional movie "shorts" on the fine points of mass cooking for doughboys and gobs.

ERNIE PYLE — Roving Reporter

You Meet Such Interesting People When You Travel Around With Ernie Pyle.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa—(By Wireless)—During the Tunisian campaign I had a chance to visit the Ninth Division only once. I didn't know a soul in this division, and I drove into their shrub-hidden command post with the same feeling of lonely uneasiness one gets in approaching a strange big city for the first time.

But as we piled out of our jeep one of the M. P.'s came over and pulled one of these columns out of his pocket—one written way back last winter about the Military Police. He laughed and said he'd been waiting a long time for me to show up. He said he knew the Military Police were good but he didn't think they were quite as good as I made them out.

This particular soldier was Pvt. Walter Wolfson, of New York. He is a coffee merchant by profession, a radio actor by avocation, and a soldier by the trend of events.

Wolfson's sergeant says of him, "If he can sell coffee like he can stop autos, he must have a good business."

Before he went into the army Wolfson was on the "Rainbow House" program. He knows a lot of poetry and opera by heart and is always reciting and singing around camp.

Wolfson's sergeant is Charles Harrington, a former mill worker from Gary, Ind. He is another one with pistol grips made from the windshield of a Messerschmitt, and he carries a picture of his wife in each side of his gun handle.

Sergeant Harrington is the only soldier I've ever seen who digs round foxholes instead of rectangular ones. He says that's literally so it will be harder for strafing bullets to get at him, but figuratively so the Devil can't get him cornered. He says he's convinced the adage is true that "there are no atheists in foxholes."

RUNNING onto these two was a pretty good start in breaking into new territory. So then we went up to the tent where correspondents always check in and find out what's going on, and who should be there but Major Robb, an old friend of mine from the San Francisco Exposition. I met him when he was publicizing the big fair. Then on another trip he and I went out together to visit Jack London's old home, the Valley of the Moon. And on a later visit to San Francisco he went with me through the wine country while I was writing some columns about the vineyards. And the last time I saw him was at the Golden Gate a year and a half ago. He was a lieutenant then, in Army public relations at the Presidio—and rapidly going nuts, I might add, from the chaos. To escape that treadmill he asked for overseas duty, and boy did he get it! He was right in the thick of things in the latter phase of the Tunisian campaign. He's a major now, and having the time of his life.

Private Wolfson, Sergeant Harrington and Major Robb have one thing in common with every soldier in the Army—they think their division is the best one extant.

Being myself a man without a division, I just agree with them all.

Pfc. Joseph Lorenze is one of my infantry friends out of the First Division. His home is in Inglewood, Cal. He's a nice, quiet, friendly fellow who worked in a furniture factory before the war.

We were together during that unforgettable period when our infantry was fighting day and night for the hills west of Mateur. I wanted to put Lorenze's name in the paper, but I told him I didn't like to use names without having some little anecdote to go with them that would be interesting to everybody. So while the shells commuted incessantly back and forth overhead, Private Lorenze and I sat in our foxholes and thought and thought, and damned if we could think of a thing to say about him, even though he had been through four big battles.

So finally I said, "Well, I'll put it in anyhow. You live only half a mile from my witty friend Cavanaugh, so I'll hook it up with that some way."

You may remember my friend Cavanaugh. He was in France in the last war when he was 16 years old. This time he is serving his country by writing me funny letters about the home front, to keep up my morale.

Used Things

WHEN I was just a little lad, I watched my mother take my half worn pants and shirt and little shoes that were too small for me, and put them in a large chest, kept in the attic. I wondered why, but for an answer she placed her broad-fingered hand upon my head and smiled.

One day, when I was grown, and leaving to be gone for eight whole months, she led me to that same large chest and opened it. I stood by, wondering. She searched until she found, near the bottom, a clean, threadbare shirt, a little pair of pants out at seat and knees—that small pair of shoes.

"Do you remember these?"

"Why, yes," I said. "I remember that I wore them."

"You were about four years old—when I put them away. They're not worth anything but just to you and me. Now that you're leaving, I'll have a still clearer picture of you, then and now. These little clothes give me lots of happy memories. They are used things . . . I guess that's why they're worth so much."

ABOVE a fireplace, on a neighbor's farm, is an oldtime muzzle loading rifle with a soiled hickory ramrod below the long, heavy barrel. Two slender powder horns, held together by an ancient leather thong, hang from a rusty, wrought iron spike. A worn leather pouch for caps extends below the trigger from a soft leather strap.

"That gun came from England, over 200 years ago," he said with honest pride. "It's been in our family name all that time. I never knew whether them seven notches filed on the barrel meant bears had been shot, or quarrelsome men," and his dark eyes twinkled.

"The barrel is worn from the balls it shot and the shoulder metal is thin at each tip. Sometimes I think that very gun might be the reason I'm living comfortably here—and my family, too. It's history in itself, that gun!"

ON A SHELF in an aged woman's home, I saw the series of McGuffey's Readers.

"Yes—look at them," she said. "But I'm goin' to tell you them's my most precious keepsakes. My grandmother used 'em, and my mother, and then me."

I took one down, and leafed it through. As I had expected, thumb and finger marks were there half way up the pages. Some of the yellowed leaves were torn. The fifth and sixth readers did not show so much the careless hands of youth, but were underscored with ink. Between the pages was an old tintype of an aged bewhiskered man.

"I wouldn't give a penny for six books like them, if they were new," she said, as I put them back. "All the family's larnin' from way back is bound up in them books—and now they're mine!"

ITALIAN FLEET MEDITERRANEAN QUESTION MARK

Do Nazis Plan to Use It In Crisis, or Will Fascists Bargain With It?

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Failure of the Italian fleet even to delay the reopening of Allied communications lines through the Mediterranean aroused speculation yesterday over the possibility that the battered but still formidable sea force is being held in reserve for some momentous development in the European war.

Two possible uses of the fleet, which may include as many as seven or eight battleships, were considered in informed quarters:

1. If the German high command has effective control of the force with its own officers in key spots, it might be employed at Hitler's direction to battle any Allied invasion thrust across the Mediterranean into Europe. Properly fought, the fleet could offer considerable resistance to a British-French-American invasion armada.

2. If Italians still have effective control of their navy, they may be holding it not so much for its fighting powers as for its value as a force with which to bargain in case the Italians decide to try to make terms with the Allies.

While the record of failure of the Italian fleet in the past is considered a fairly good indication of what may be expected from the Italians in any future naval operations, there is one exception.

Authorities here said that a battle in defense of their own shores probably would inspire the Italian officers and men to put forth more prodigious efforts in conflict than they have yet shown.

The exact makeup of the Italian naval force is a matter of speculation but there may be seven, at the outside eight, battleships capable of action. This estimate is frankly liberal and the number of battlewagons capable of fighting in the immediate future may be two or three less than that.

The Italian battleships are of two classes. The Littorio and the Cesare.

The four ships of the Littorio class are modern 35,000 ton vessels carrying nine 15-inch guns. The Littorio itself was torpedoed and disabled during the British attack on the naval base at Taranto in November, 1940. The Littorio Veneto was damaged by British torpedo hits in March, 1941. The Impero and the Roma were believed to be still under construction a year ago but may have been put into commission by this time.

The four ships of the Cesare class were built prior to the first World war and originally outfitted with ten 12.6 inch guns. These 23,000 ton vessels were the Giulio Cesare, the Caio Duilio, the Andrea Doria and the Cavour. The Cavour was badly damaged at Taranto and either the Duilio or Doria also was hit. The Cavour foundered the authoritative naval work, Janes' fighting ships, said that although it was refloated it is believed to have proved virtually useless as a combat vessel.

In addition to their capital ships, the Italians are estimated to have about ten cruisers, 90 destroyers and 70 submarines. They may have lost some destroyers and submarines in the recent Allied aerial pounding of their main naval bases. They also are credited with a large force of motor torpedo boats.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

I did not wonder at Olina's exclamation, for Mary was playing a most realistic role of a woman suffering great pain.

Mary looked at her dully.

"It's really nothing," she said. "I'll be over it in a little while. It's just my leg acting up a bit. And I can't blame it," she added with a wan smile. "Just look at the overcoat the poor thing has to wear! No wonder it rebels!"

With a quick movement she pulled the afghan half off, revealing the heavy cast with its bandages. I saw Olina's eyes widen, and knew that she had never seen the cast before. I saw also that for the first time she believed Mary's accident to be genuine and not a pretense, and that she was most remorseful for her earlier doubt.

Olina Is Sympathetic.

"Oh, Mary how awful!" she said. "I—I—didn't realize how bad it was. I'm so sorry."

Mary looked at her with questioning eyes.

"I've thought sometimes, Lina," she said with elaborate humility, "that you imagined this sprain was a phony."

Olina flushed, and opened her mouth to answer, whether in protest or acquiescence I did not know, for Mary spoke again.

"But you're convinced now?" she asked gently.

"Of course," Olina returned, and then Mary's face relaxed, and her musical laugh rang out.

"Now I can die happy!" she exclaimed, and as Olina's eyes widened, she put out her hand and clutched the sleeve of the other girl.

"Please forgive me, Lina," she said. "I knew you hadn't been fooled from the beginning, and it hurt my pride a bit. I thought if I could just make you believe the thing was real for even a minute or two, I'd be happy. But I'm not. It was a lousy trick to play on you, and I'm awfully sorry."

Not Resentful.

Olina, showing no resentment, only stared at her. "You mean," she said, "that the accident was a phony, after all, and that you don't need that cast?"

"That's exactly what I mean," Mary said, "and you can't tell me you weren't on from the first."

"I was sure you were pretending," Olina answered slowly, "up to the time I came in today. You surely put it over with a bang. But I am awfully glad you're all right, and you've surely fooled everybody else."

"You're one fine scout, Lina," Mary said, and I found myself mentally echoing her.

"Tell me, Lina," Mary said, does your mother know?"

"I don't know," Olga's daughter replied. "She has never said anything to me about it. It would depend altogether—"

She broke off abruptly.

"What does my stepfather know?" she asked.

"Everything," Mary replied "He and Grandpa Spencer planned it, when they met head on over the question of firing Steve. Papa Veritzen was bound to get rid of him, said I never should have to play opposite him again, but Grandpa Spencer said it was necessary for him to stay on a little longer. So then they fixed up this scheme."

Her Mother Knows.

"Then," Olina said thoughtfully, "you may be sure Maman knows. My stepfather has no secrets from her. But not by the flicker of an eyelash has she ever indicated that she knows. And, let me give you a bit of advice. Play the game out with her to the end. When the revelation finally comes she must be the one to say that she has known it, and you must be surprised that she found out. Do you see?"

"Of course I see," Mary said heartily, "and I'll play ball."

"I want you all to play ball for the next few days," I interrupted, "and help me all you can. I'm going to take over the care of Mary while Aunt Katherine is gone from the city for a while, and I don't know whether or not my work will be sufficiently realistic to pass muster."

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, June 1.

Under the expansive influence of the major planets, ambitious plans should fall into line with ease, especially where these are of sufficient scope to attract support from public bodies It is probable that secret understandings may prosper, but all must be handled discreetly. This friendly and expansive influence may extend to social, domestic and affectional relations as well.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a happy, progressive and interesting year, in which cherished ambitions may be attained albeit by sagacious, subtle or unusual methods or programs. Political, diplomatic or large corporations are amenable to shrewd handling In domestic, affectional and friendly contacts there is much pleasure.

A child born on this day may have unusual abilities, of a subtle or shrewd cleverness, with keen insight or foresight. Its private life should be interesting and happy.

Answers To Your Dream Of A Summer Hat

Summer hats are bobbing up again and here are three lovely prizes from a collection at Saks Fifth avenue in New York. The green parrots on the chartreuse lace straw model, upper left, may not talk, but the hat itself speaks eloquently of flattery. Triple fashion threat is the black lace hat with triangular shape brim at lower left. Crownless, with a black velvet ribbon, it is ideal for dining and dancing under summer stars. Natural lacey straw to go with everything is the basis for the giant beret shown at right. It takes on a glamorous air by the addition of a ruffled black grosgrain ribbon around the brim and crown. There's plenty of femininity in these models.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

UNAUTHORIZED TALK

Not only is it proper, but it will pay you in the long run to give serious attention to what you say during the period of the auction. Unauthorized conversation which gives your partner information about your hand should be penalized, and is penalized, under the laws of the game. The same is true regarding exposure of certain cards, and as to calls made after the auction is closed. Here is the way the new Laws of Contract Bridge treat those matters:

1. If during the auction, a player makes a remark which discloses to his partner the nature of his hand, or his intentions or desires, or the presence or absence of a card in his hand, regardless of the size of that card, the penalty is that the opponent at his left may require the offender and his partner to pass whenever it is their turn to call, and the authorized opponent may require or forbid the lead of a specified suit when first it is the offending side's turn to lead.

2. If, during the auction, a player faces a card on the table or sees the face of a card belonging to his partner; if there is only one card, lower than a jack and not prematurely led, there is no penalty, and the card, if detached, may forthwith be picked up; if the card is an ace, king, queen or jack, or if it is prematurely led, or if there are two or more cards, either at the same or different times, the owner's partner must pass whenever it is his turn to call, and, if the owner becomes a defender, the declarer may treat every such card as a penalty card," or if the other defender becomes the opening leader, the declarer may require or forbid the lead of a specified suit.

3. A call made after the auction is closed is canceled. If it is a pass made by a defender, or any call made by a contractor, there is no penalty. If it is a bid, double or redouble made by a defender, the declarer may announce that he will impose a lead penalty when next it is the other defender's turn to lead, at which time he may require or forbid him to lead a specified suit (in an appropriate case, this includes the right to call the opening lead.)

German Women Just Can't Take It

By THOMAS F. HAWKINS

(AP Features)

BERNE, Switzerland — Silk stockings are snagging the machines in Naziland factories. The drive for total mobilization of German women is slowing down after several weeks of valiant trying.

The big reason is that the wives of lawyers, doctors, merchants, "the better families" and those of the moderate middle class are not fitting in. The women who must work resent the women of the silk-stocking (ersatz) level who arrive at the factories in smart clothes with powdered faces and leather gloves. "The ladies" are finding it hard to adopt themselves to the early morning hours mechanics' grease, hardships and health hazards of the metal, chemicals, smelting and munitions industries.

The poorer women, who must go home after work to cook a late meal for grouchy susbands, complain that the more dainty females are being alloted the easier tasks. They think of shopping queues and the darning and mending that must be done at home to stretch out clothing rations. Childless women with husbands at the front are not happy at being moved into camps closer to their jobs.

This outbreak of class feeling is the most openly apparent that has arisen since the war began. It has stirred up the nearest thing to a free-for-all discussion on morale in the German press since Adolf Hitler came into power that fateful 30th of January, 1933. It has forced modification of working conditions in the enlistment drive, which may gradually be abandoned.

It is the German press which tells the story: 90 per cent of all women under 20 years old already had been mobilized in 1940, according to the Deutsche Allgemaine Zeitung, a large percentage of them into work camps. This would be close to 4,000,000 girls, on the basis of the 1939 census for the ages 16 to 20.

The paper says the new registration hits women between 35 and 45, approximately 6,500,000. The Frankfort Zeitung declares that women between 30 and 45 are being mobilized, which means the Nazi regime has undertaken to register a flat 10 million women. Many women between 20 and 30 are exempt because of the number of small children; the sick and farm women and some other categories which are exempt reduce the total of potential workers by about 30 per cent.

The Frankfurter Zeitung's series of articles for the enlistment drive painted glowing conditions of work and gave assurances that problems were being solved, but also said: "The response to labor offices is not everywhere fully good, but is better than expected. . . . Half-day and half-week work will be used when full-time occupation cannot succeed."

Of the difficulty of training women novices it states: "She makes many mistakes . . . the larger group has no idea of the needs of work . . . it is hard to know where to put them at the beginning. Many women try to get work that requires the least possible effort . . . the original reluctance of new workers made them turn out work at relatively low levels at first . . . then ambition awoke . . . for these, lectures are given, but most women simply won't do their work and don't have much interest in attending classes."

Members Of Garden Club Hear Talk On 'Shrubs'

Mrs. Wade, of the Wade and Gatton Nursery was a guest speaker at the meeting of the Garden Study club, which was held at the home of Mrs. W. S. Valmore, Cook road. Mrs. Wade gave an interesting and informative talk on "Shrubs." She was introduced by Mrs. Clarence Lisle.

In her talk, Mrs. Wade classified shrubs in three groups. The first was shrubs that produce blooms before leaves, second, shrubs producing flowers after the leaves and third, the winter shrubs.

She told of the various types of shrubs and showed specimens of them. In her discussion she spoke of grouping shrubs according to their blossoms, contour and coloring. After her talk she conducted a question and answer period in which members of the club participated.

Luncheon was served at small tables centered with spring flowers, after which Mrs. L. E. Strain, president, presided at the meeting.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. O. L. McDaniel, Shepherd road, June 11. That meeting will be for guests.

Sport Podge by REX HESS

This is one of those mornings after the wedding stories.

You know the kind: where the bridegroom wakes up and finds everything is not just exactly as he planned.

So this is a story about a young Mansfielder who had nine days leave from Great Lakes Naval Training station, and hurried home to get married, and lost no time doing just that when he got here.

And when he woke up the next morning, he discovered he had—guess.

SCARLET FEVER!

It happened to Harold Hammer, the Madison high school football and basketball star, who was married just last Tuesday, woke up Wednesday morning sicker than somewhat, and all decorated with scarlet fever.

And his 9-day leave was automatically turned into a 5-week quarantine, which is something he had just gotten out of at Great Lakes.

He's waiting official orders from the Navy now on whether to be sick at home or at Great Lakes. And a happy Decoration day to you, Harold, m'boy.

Every year about this time—

I promise myself very solemnly that I will not play 18 holes of golf in one day until I have been playing nine regularly for two or three weeks.

Reason: I want to get in shape gradually for the long course, to avoid stiff joints, aching muscles, and the general done-in feeling.

And every year about this time—

I get stiff joints, aching muscles and the general done-in feeling. Reason: I break my promise.

Yesterday it happened. After one Sunday playing five holes, the next playing six, I succumbed yesterday to what passes for a sunshiny day this spring, and went the 18.

Only consolation was the 45 on the second nine which matched the cards I turned in so often last summer. Proving I'm in the groove again, or is it rut?

Today the aches and pains.

No, I'm not going in the lumber business. These things I'm struggling around with are crutches.

Yankees Regain Top Spot

Sweep Double Header From Cleveland Tribe.

By JUDSON BAILEY
(AP Sports Writer)

THE New York Yankees have straightened out the dispute over leadership of the American league and the Brooklyn Dodgers will have a chance today to accomplish the same end in the National league.

The Dodgers open a four-game series at St. Louis and all they have to do to keep the Redbirds on their roost in second place is get a split. The senior circuit rivals divided their first four-game series at Brooklyn.

Yesterday, before the largest crowd of the season, 50,671 paid, the Yankees swept a double-header from Cleveland 4-3 and 3-2 to regain the lead as Washington lost twice to the Chicago White Sox 5-2 and 5-1.

The turnover at the top of the American league was only one of many interesting items as the major leagues put on the first half of their double-barreled Memorial Day celebration before a total paid attendance of 172,984. All clubs will play double-headers again today.

The Philadelphia Athletics swept two games from the St. Louis Browns 3-0 and 4-1 and moved into third place in the junior circuit.

The Boston Red Sox downed Detroit twice 3-0 and 5-1 with Dick Newsome pitching the shutout on six hits and Lou Lucier being almost equally effective in the nightcap on seven safeties.

In the National league Brooklyn battered the Cincinnati Reds twice 6-0 and 10-6. The Dodgers introduced Boyd Bartley, their newly signed collegian from the University of Illinois at shortstop. He went hitless in both games.

Pittsburgh rocketed from seventh to fourth in the standings by pummeling the Phillies twice 4-3 and 2-1.

The only doubleheader that was divided was at St. Louis, where the New York Giants won the first game 7-6 and then lost the second 3-2.

Bill Nicholson hit two home runs, each with a man on base, to help Paul Derringer and the Chicago Cubs beat the Boston Braves 5-1. The second game was postponed because of weather.

Milnar Gets Last Chance

Tribe Ready To Trade Hurlers For Fielders.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— In Manager Lou Boudreau's own words, Al Milnar gets "one more chance" when he hurls for the Cleveland Indians in one half of today's double header with the Washington Nationals.

"There's no point in carrying a lot of dead wood in one department when we need help so badly in another," the Tribe pilot elaborated. "We've got 12 pitchers and we'll have 13 when Mel Harder is ready again and most of them aren't contributing anything.

"We've got to get ourselves an outfielder and some of the other clubs need pitchers and so maybe we can get together on something.

"The trouble is, of course, that no one has much of anything to spare in any department."

Milnar has made two starts this season and has been shelled from the mound both times. The big southpaw won 18 games in 1940 but his record last year was a miserable six won and eight lost.

Boudreau also listed Vernon Kennedy in his "one more chance department. Kennedy is practically unhittable when pitching batting practice but in a game he has little or nothing on the ball.

The Indians topped the league a week ago but they reposed in fourth place today after a double defeat by the New York Yankees.

The McCarthymen took both games by one run, 4 to 3 and 3 to 2.

REDS PLAY DEAD

CINCINNATI—(AP)—For six days of the week the Cincinnati Reds go along like a pretty fair ball club but when Sunday rolls around they play dead.

The Reds have lost in six Sundays of play this season.

Deacon Bill McKechnie, Cincinnati manager, is thoroughly convinced Sunday baseball is downright sinful—especially the way his athletes play it. Take yesterday for instance. The Dodgers brought them into camp by scores of 6 to 0 and 10 to 6.

The first game was run off in orderly fashion. Whitlow Wyatt, Brooklyn pitcher, allowed but three hits and issued one pass during his labors while his mates succeeded in getting to the offerings of Bucky Walters, Vernon Stone and Bob Malloy for 10 safeties.

The nightcap, however, turned into a nightmare before it was ended. In two hours and 35 minutes, 28 players saw action.

Claims Alsab Good as Ever

'They Can't Beat Him,' Declares Trainer.

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—(AP)—Part of the mystery surrounding Alsab's long vacation from the track was lifted when the son of Good Goods was shipped here from his farm near Lexington for conditioning at Churchill Downs. He will run again.

But another question—just how good is the $700 bargain colt?—remains to be answered. Some experts say the Sabath horse, in making 23 starts last year, was run too often and that he never will be as good any more as he was as a three-year-old. Alsab Farm Manager John Zoeller thinks otherwise.

"As good as ever—maybe better," says Johnny, who is in position to know as much about the horse as the next one. "I don't believe they can beat him."

Improving on Alsab's 1942 record would be like finding a right fielder for the Yankees who could make the fans forget Babe Ruth. He finished in the money 19 times after a slow start, beat the great Whirlaway twice, and wound up the year with $234,565 in earnings, second only to Shut Out in that respect. During the stretch from February to November, Alsab sometimes raced as much as five times in less than 30 days.

"This was his first real rest," Zoeller said, referring to Alsab's layoff since last December. His next start will be left up to Trainer Sarg Swenke. But a glance at the records shows it was May 9 last year before the Sabath colt won a race, his ninth start of the season. Zoeller indicated he believed the long rest will do wonders for the wonder horse.

The next few months will show. But it is certain at this late date that Alsab will not run 23 times this year as he did last, or even 22 times as he did the previous year.

One of the few college boys to make the quick jump into major league baseball with no minor league experience, Michael Franklin (Pinky) Higgins, veteran third sacker of the Detroit Tigers, today is in the thick of the fight for the American league batting leadership.

Higgins is batting over the .360 mark as a splurge which resulted in his hitting successfully in 16 straight games before being stopped.

A quiet, efficient workman and one of the league's standout third basemen, Higgins graduated from the University of Texas in 1930 and wound up playing for Connie Mack's Athletics the same year. He was farmed out to Dallas and San Antonio in 1931 and then sent to Portland of the Pacific Coast league.

At Portland Higgins was a workhorse, taking part in 189 games at the hot corner, getting 35 hits and batting .326.

That was enough for Mack. Higgins and two other Portland stars, Lou Finney and Bob Johnson, were brought up to the A's. All three were destined for stardom.

Higgins became the regular Mack third sacker in his first season. He played in 152 games, batting .314. Until 1936, when Higgins was traded to the Boston Red Sox for Bill Werber, the Coast league infielder was one of the leading players on the Athletic team.

Two seasons with Boston and Higgins was traded to Detroit for Elden Auker and other players.

Higgins has been the regular Tiger hot corner guardian since 1939.

In 11 years in the majors, Higgins has played in 1,439 games and has a batting average of .295.

A right-handed batter, Higgins holds several records. In 1938 he registered 12 hits in succession, a major league mark. He also hit three home runs in one game, tying a league record for third basemen.

A native of Red Oak, Tex., Higgins likes to hunt, play golf and fish when not playing baseball. He received that nickname, "Pinky," as a small boy because of his complexion.

Tom Harmon Flies Bomber In Africa

NEW YORK—(AP)—Ralph Howard, NBC correspondent, reported today in a broadcast from Algiers that Lieut. Thomas Harmon, former All-American football star at the University of Michigan, had arrived in North Africa to become a P-38 Lightning fighter pilot.

Harmon in April was rescued after four days in a South American jungle after bailing out of a bomber he was flying.

Two of his companions were killed and three others were never found. Harmon arrived at a Florida base to recuperate on April 24.

HUNTER HANGS UP HIS RUNNING BROGANS

NOTRE DAME, Ind.—(AP)—Ollie Hunter has run his last race for Notre Dame. The great Irish distance runner is enrolled in the Navy V-7 program.

Hunter says he may be hanging up his shoes for good. "I'll be out of practice after the war," commented Ollie, "and I may be too old to start again. I sure would like to get another crack at Greg Rice. He's the greatest runner in the country."

LEADS THEM ALL

COOPERSTOWN, N. Y.—(AP)—Of the 14 baseball immortals selected for the Hall of Fame by the Baseball Writers' Association of America, Ty Cobb had the best all-time batting record, hitting .367 in 3,033 games stretched out over 24 years.

Illini Take Central Meet

Miami Vaulter Ties Minnesota Champion.

CHICAGO—(AP)—Scoring in 11 of 16 events, the University of Illinois track squad captured the 18th annual Central Collegiate Track and field championship Saturday.

The Illini piled up 52¾ points. Next was Marquette with 48¼, then Minnesota with 34½.

Ohio University tallied 4½ for tenth and Miami University bagged 2 points for 13th.

Rowan Crawford of Miami University at Oxford, O., earned a tie in the pole vault with Champion Jac Defield of Minnesota.

MOOSE LOOP GOLFERS ORGANIZE TONIGHT

Golfers in the new Moose league meet tonight at 7 o'clock at Coolridge golf course to organize for the season.

Yesterday there were exactly 32 nibluck swingers signed up for the league, just enough for eight 4-man teams, and several more are needed for substitute duty, and to replace those who may be called to the service during the summer.

Oh, Brother!

When you want to find some real glamor in feminine sports, you look to the swimming world. Remember Eleanor Holm Jarrett? Then came Gloria Callen. Beauties and champion swimmers, too. The latest glamor gal in the swim world is Esther Williams, former national swimming champion. Esther, shown above, now is in the movies and already a very much-talked-about girl.

Athletic Supplies Lead Loop

East Side Defeats Sports, Escape Cellar.

MANSFIELD Athletic Supplies came from behind yesterday to defeat American Legion 9-4 and take first place in the Commercial baseball league.

East Side Merchants romped over Yuncker Sports 16-10 in the other league tilt, pushing the Sports into the cellar.

American Legion tallied three runs in the second inning but tall Jack Hammett, Union high school cage star on the mound for the Athletics, held them the rest of the way, giving up one more marker in the seventh after his teammates had given him a long lead.

Dean Hahn, Mansfield high cage star, started on the hill for the Legion, and was relieved by McCarrick. Athletics got a run in the third, and came back with batches of three in the fifth and seventh.

Hammett fanned six, gave three walks, while Hahn whiffed four and McCarrick two.

The other game was a slugging bee with Yunckers starting out with a 5-3 lead in the first inning, and each team adding two runs in the second. The Sports boosted the count to 10-5 in the fourth, but that ended their run making for the day.

East Side tallied four in the fifth, and took the lead with two more in the sixth, two in the seventh and three in the eighth.

Eckles went the route on the hill for East Side while Miller, starting for Yunckers, was relieved by Thomas.

Eichler hit a home run for the Sports.

AN APPLE FOR EVE --

By Kathleen Norris

(Copyright, 1943)

CHAPTER XXII

At noontime, after Owen had been fed and put down for his nap, she was superintending the small girls' midday meal when Chris came up to the terrace. The world thrilled for her as if a resonant note had been struck on some great cosmic harp.

"Oh, listen now, weren't you supposed to be in San Francisco this morning?"

"It wasn't important," Chris answered. "Hello, ladies! I asked the man in the candy store what sort of sweets you could eat, and he said molasses taffy. So here it is."

"And what do you say?" Loveday broke a bar of the candy in two, wrapped the segments in puffs of oiled paper. "Sit here nicely and eat these," she directed the twins, "for I don't want you to get your beds all sticky."

"Do they go to bed now?"

"Naps. That's the general idea," Loveday said, gathering mugs and bowls and fragments of bread neatly on a tray.

"How about a sandwich and a glass of milk for me?" Chris asked.

"Oh—well, of course!" Loveday answered, a little confused. "I'll take these children upstairs and settle them down and see what we can find."

"I suppose it would be completely useless to expect you to run off with me somewhere for lunch?"

"Completely . . . Oh, what sticky hands!" Loveday said to the little girls. "Come along, sweets. I'll be back in ten minutes, Chris."

She had changed her dress when she reappeared carrying a tray. She wore a thin tennis frock of striped blue and darker blue, with a red leather belt and a bunch of red shining cherries on her shoulder. In her ears she had put red cherry earrings; she laughed ingeniously as she saw his pleasure in her appearance.

"This is my new outfit, and I thought that if ever there was an occasion for it this was the occasion. When I bought it—in Indian Hill, by the way, and for three ninety-five—I didn't dream I'd have a distinguished New York playwright for luncheon!"

"It's charming," Chris said, "and I don't believe that three ninety-five stuff for one minute!"

"What do you know about dresses?"

"Not much. But something of women. I've known women to pay more than a hundred dollars for a dress like that—at one of the Avenue stores."

"Those shops! Oh, it must be so exciting," Loveday said, half-serious, half yearning, "to have the saleswomen come out and show you dresses and hats and furs and lovely thin silk coats and shawls, and to have everything new—a touch of this and a twist of that to show every woman who meets you that you look long, that you know what you're wearing! Just once."

"I've been wondering why you couldn't take a little holiday and go to New York. In October, say. That's the best month of the year. We could take a run up to Connecticut, and you'd go out of your senses over the red leaves, and I'd take you to whatever best nights there were. Don't look so scared!" Chris interrupted himself, laughing. "I mean only for two or three weeks. It would be a break for you."

"A break!" she echoed, mildly mournful.

"Mother's going on with Nini for the trousseau shopping," he reminded her. "My name doesn't have to come into it at all. I'd only have to say to Mother, 'Why don't bring Loveday? She needs a holiday,' and I bet she'd fall for it like a ton of Coos Bay coal. I'll tell her that I might be there and might not, which is quite true."

"It all sounds too utterly open and frank and simple!" Loveday commented, and they both laughed. "A holiday like that would be dazzling beyond my wildest dreams," she went on seriously, "for I've never been anywhere, except to the convent, and that educational that wasn't exciting. But to go on with your mother and Nini and see Fifth Avenue and Rockefeller Center and Central Park! Larry and Anne Lurn could run things here. I haven't the right clothes, of course—"

She stopped, quite breathless. Then the light died from her eyes and she shook her head.

"But of course it's quite impossible," she said, spacing and stressing her words slowly.

"Nonsense!" Chris said. "We aren't traveling by covered wagon these days. You get on a plane here at 5 o'clock in the afternoon and you lunch with me the next day—let me see where? I like the Chambord because it's Paris. But you might like—yes, we'd go to the Waldorf, just for the sound of it. Then we'd walk up to the park, looking in all the windows—"

"Ah, stop, Chris! No fair! But someday I will—with Martha and Betsey to do the shopping. When Grandfather Gurney's money is found!"

She had turned the conversation deliberately; they fell to talking of the lost fortune and of the extraordinary chance of Hugh's discovery of his own identity. Loveday's eyes shone when she mentioned her brother.

"You can't think how thrilling it is to have this clever young doctor suddenly with a room in our house, quite free to come and go here and to kiss me!"

"I might be able to have some ideas on that subject," Chris said dryly. He saw her bright color come up.

"Oh well!" She dismissed the question cheerfully. "But Hugh is an absolute darling," she went on. "He's working much too hard at camp. Now it's all the draftees and shots for typhoid and tetanus, and they keep sending new men in—and they had eleven cases of mumps!

"And how much is this money, Loveday?"

"We don't know, of course. We don't know how much grandfather spent or lost or wasted or what happened. There may be no money," Loveday conceded. "But all that piled-up granite stuff you saw yesterday below the orchard is for the foundations of a hospital, and of course if we find enough we'll build that hospital.

"Did you ever," he asked dreamily, looking toward the west, "climb to the balcony of that windmill?"

"Did I ever? I used fairly to live up there when I was quite a small girl."

"How do you get to the ladder?"

"Stairs inside, two flights, smelling of grain and mice and with no railings"

"Let's climb up there now?"

"Oh, Chris, I'd love to!" Loveday's eyes danced. "Wait until I speak to Annie Lurn,' she said.

A minute later they crossed the paddock and took the eucalyptus-scented lane to the old barn behind which the windmill stood. Loveday led the way up the dark stairways inside, stairways slippery with long polishing from sacks and straw. Sometimes she turned and extended to Chris her strong brown hand.

The air was aromatic and sweet. Loveday leaned her arms on the railing; Chris was silent; they fell into a moment of dreams.

"My daughters will be waking up," Loveday presently said, rousing herself. "I must go down."

"Oh, but this is so perfect!" Chris pleaded. "Hold it just a moment longer! I have been happy and proud in my life, but I've never felt like this, up here between the earth and sky with you!"

"I've always loved the mill." Her elbows were on the rail, her back half turned toward him, when she felt his arms about her and felt him turning her about to kiss her on the lips.

For a moment she surrendered to the sheer breathless joy of it. Then quickly, with an abrupt manner and averted eyes, she started down the ladder again. When she reached the stairs below Chris was with her, and they descended the two flights in silence. But in the lane outside he took her hand, and their fingers were locked as they went toward the house. Neither spoke.

"What time would it be?" she asked suddenly when they were almost at the house. "Owen's awake; I can hear him."

"It's only quarter past three."

"Quarter past three!" she made the three words three separate exclamations. Her face flushed and her manner became hurried and uneasy. It was as if she sensed then that she would find what she did find when they crossed the paddock again and were in sight of the terrace. It was as if she had known that by some strange mischance her brother would be there and that Larry, with the crying Owen in his arms, would have by a second mischance have come home. His face a thundercloud; he was trying to fasten the dress of one twin while the other, undressed, crowded up against him, fretfully attempting to gain his attention.

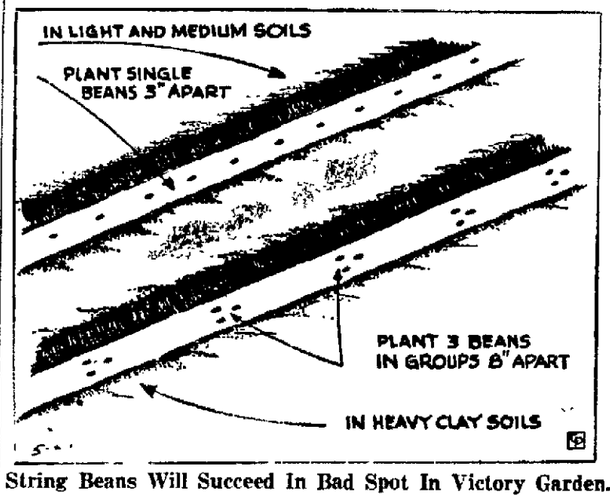
Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



String Beans Will Succeed In Bad Spot In Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Asso.

If you have a section of your Victory garden where the soil is not overly fertile, reserve that spot for a planting of bush snap beans or string beans. They will succeed in soil not good enough for certain other crops. In fact, when these beans are planted in very rich soil the vine growth becomes heavy at the expense of the pods.

Plant bush snap beans three to four inches apart in the row, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. Space the rows two feet apart. Cover the seeds with one inch of soil unless the soil is sandy, in which case cover the seeds with two inches of soil.

In very heavy clay soil it is advisable to plant the beans in groups of three about eight inches apart, as illustrated. The group effort of the three seedlings makes it easier for the tender sprouts to force their way up through the heavy soil, since each plant helps the others.

One pound of seed will plant a 100-foot row. The seeds usually germinate in about one week. The plants are mature in from 45 to 60 days. For a succession of beans, plant seeds every 10 days or two weeks until the middle of August.

Family Of 13 Puts Jinx On Axis In War Plant

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS CLEAR PRICE PUZZLES

Rationing Problems Are Also Discussed By OPA Experts In New Series.

(Editor's Note: In this series of questions and answers, the Office of Price Administration hopes to clear up confusion among consumers on problems concerning price ceilings and rationing. An announcement from the Cleveland office of the OPA said it hoped to issue the series weekly.)

Q. Is there a ceiling price on women's rayon hosiery?

A. Yes, the OPA has established a definite and clear cut dollars-and-cents price on every grade and type of women's rayon hose, whether the full fashioned or circular knit. Every sale of hose purchased at retail has a label or ticket showing the gauge for full fashioned hose or the needle count for circular knit hose, and the definite dollars-and-cents price. In addition, the department in which the hosiery is sold has posted prices giving the same information.

Q. What is the ceiling price of new potatoes?

A. From 5 to 7½c per pound depending on the origin of the potatoes, the freight rate determines the differentials in price.

Q. I have a summer home, and would like to obtain fuel oil for cooking and heating hot water. How do I obtain it?

A. You apply to your local War Price and Rationing Board where, if you qualify you will be issued a special ration.

Q. I wear my older shoes or buy a special pair of work type shoes to use on my job. Are these safety shoes?

A. Safety shoes are shoes which have any one of the following features: steel toes box, electrical resistant, electrical conductivity, non-sparking or Congress type of molder's shoes. All other types are considered general wear shoes except those which cannot be used for such wear.

Q. Why must I get my tires recapped? I have a "C" ration. I am entitled to have Group I tires?

A. If you have a tire capable of recapping you must have it recapped regardless what ration book for gasoline you hold. If tires are run beyond recapping stage, you will be charged with abuse and no rations will be granted.

Q. Will potatoes become more plentiful soon?

A. Yes, the new potato crop will relieve the shortage somewhat.

Q. I need a hot water tank. Can I obtain a certificate to purchase it from the local War Price and Rationing Board?

A. No, the right to purchase a hot water tank is given by the War Production board. Your local dealer who sells hot water tanks can advise you as to the necessary qualifications to obtain a new tank.

Q. I am a Red Cross Nurses' aide and need special shoes for such work, must I use my No. 17 stamp?

A. Yes, such shoes while they are considered a special type necessary for the job require a stamp. Use of the stamp, however, will not prevent you getting another stamp if all stamps in the family have been used and you do not have two pair of wearable shoes which can be used for the purpose intended.

Q. When must I have my tires inspected?

A. "C" books by May 31st. "B" by June 30th; "A" books by Sept. 30th.

Q. When and how do I receive canning sugar?

A. Starting Monday, May 24th, stamp 15 and 16 in War Ration Book One became good for five pounds each and will be taken by your retailer up and to Oct. 31, 1943.

Nearly one-tenth of the entire U. S. population was hospitalized in 1942.

CITY'S FIRE LOSS GOES UP

With a fire loss of $257,381 during 1942, Mansfield stands at the head of a list of 11 Ohio cities with populations between 31 and 44 thousand, according to a Chamber of Commerce report based on figures compiled by W. G. Schultz, fire prevention engineer of Lumbermens Muutal Insurance company.

Biggest factor in putting Mansfield's loss $76,000 above the next highest figure was the Congregational church fire unofficially estimated at $200,000 loss.

A $186,695 loss in Lima was the second highest figure reported. Other losses include Steubenville, $132,994; Lorain, $105,404; Portsmouth, $86,842; Middletown, $62,800; Marion, $30,598; Newark, $15,329; East Cleveland, $11,761; Norwood, $10,923, and Zanesville, $9,682.

DECORATION DAY

This is a truly memorable Decoration Day. For many years now, on this occasion we have honored those who fought valiantly in past wars. Today we honor those who fight TODAY, as well, under the glorious red-white-and blue.

The pilot releasing the bomb lever . . . the soldier guarding his post . . . the sailor high in the look-out . . . the civilian buying bonds . . . Americans all, who on this Memorial Day, 1943, honor our heroes by keeping aflame the torch of Freedom their bravery helped to keep shining bright. To the glorious dead of former wars, the gallant heroes of today pledge their faith and their all so that Liberty's torch may light the world!

LET CONTRACT FOR PARK JOB

City Accepts $2,271 Bid to Beautify Lake, Replace Span At North Lake.

Contract for a grading and beautification project at North Lake park has been awarded to R. O. Darling and Son, Mansfield contractors, Service-Safety Director Fred B. Wolff announced yesterday.

The Mansfield firm was the lone bidder, contracting for the work at $2,271, or $52 below the estimated cost.

Project plans call for removal of the bridge at the lake overflow, removal of earth from the steep embankment behind the shelter house to form a levee to replace the bridge, and improvement and beautification of the dam and waterfall at the east end of the lake.

Frank Burton, city park superintendent, said the project probably will be completed early in the summer.

Approximately 1,700 cubic yards of grading will be done, 42 tons of slag will be used for a roadway over the levee, and 130 feet of 36-inch sewer and 10 feet of 24-inch sewer will be built to carry the water away from the lake.

HUNTS CAMERAS

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The navy appealed today for a special type of expensive camera made only in Germany, saying only that such cameras were needed for "a vital activity in the war against the Axis."

The camera is the "Robot, Model II," and to be acceptable must be equipped with one of these Zeiss Tessar lenses: 30 mm. f2.8, 32.5 mm. f2.8, or 37.5 mm. f2.8.

FAITH IN MAN SHAKEN

SAN JOSE, Cal. —(U.P.)— W. K. Grassley, operator of an "Honor Parking Lot," where the customers dropped what they owed for parking a car in a box maintained for that purpose, has had his faith somewhat shocked, not in his honor system, but in humanity. He told the police he remained convinced that every customer had dropped his coin in the box—but then, along came a thief who pried open the box and stole the coins.

MEMORIAL DAY TRIBUTE PAID IN 2 PROGRAMS

Rev. Swoyer, Louis Bromfield Call For Preservation of Freedom, Democracy.

Cochran, member of the American Legion Auxiliary, read the list of auxiliary dead for the same wars.

The program reached its climax with the American Legion bugle corps playing taps. The audience stood erect as the inspiring strains echoed through the cemetery.

The program closed with Rev. Saleste giving the benediction.

At the morning exercises, nearly 400 gathered at Charles Mill lake where tribute was paid men of the United States Navy and Marine corps at a service for which Author-Farmer Louis Bromfield gave the address.

"We can pay no greater tribute to the men who have given their lives than to keep alive the ideals of this country which was home to them," Bromfield said.

"We must fight on our home front against corruption and cynicism and demogoguery, and we must remain united and strong in our fight against every move to limit our liberties.

"We can best reward these boys by living as real Americans and as real Christians should live."

Rev. Martin Wappner, Ohio State Reformatory chaplain, opened the program with the invocation, which was followed by the playing of the Star Spangled Banner by the Madison high school band.

The assemblage gave the pledge of allegiance which was followed by Lincoln's Gettysburg address, given by Harry Constance. Bromfield's talk followed.

Three student instructors from Harrington Air Service flew over the lake and dropped floral wreaths on the lake in honor of the sailors and marines who have died in action. This was accompanied by the playing of taps by Charles Remy, member of the Madison high school band.

The Navy Mothers also placed flowers on the lake, in honor of their sons now in service.

The service at Mansfield cemetery was preceded by the annual Memorial day parade, witnessed by an estimated 8,000 persons.

The parade formed on Park avenue west and marched east to Central park, around the park and to the cemetery.

Included in the marching units were the American Legion drum and bugle corps, Senior high school band, Johnny Appleseed junior high school band, John Simpson junior high school band, with members of various patriotic organizations.

Another highlight of the day was the placing of a floral wreath at the Doughboy monument in Central park.

This ceremony was conducted by members of the American Legion auxiliary with Rev. Swoyer as speaker.

The graves of war veterans were decorated with emblems and wreaths during morning activities.

HOUSE BALLOTS TOMORROW ON PAY-GO TAXES

Quick Passage Predicted By Both Democratic and GOP Leaders.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — The house tomorrow takes up—perhaps for the last time—pay-as-you-go income tax legislation, and both Democratic and Republican leaders predicted quick approval of a senate-house conference committee report.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton, D., N. C., of the ways and means committee, will ask the house to approve the report, and Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts has promised his support.

The Republicans previously lined up almost solidly for the Ruml plan of complete forgiveness of a year's income taxes, while Democrats in the house consistently opposed complete forgiveness.

The bill, as finally agreed upon by the conference committee, provides complete forgiveness of 1942 income taxes only for those whose liability for last year was $50 or less. Persons with a tax liability between $50 and $66.67 are forgiven a flat $50, and persons whose liability exceeds $66.67 are forgiven 75 per cent of their 1942 or 1943 taxes, whichever is smaller.

A 20 per cent payroll withholding levy would start July 1 under all the pay-as-you-go proposals. Payments on the unforgiven portion of income taxes may be made in equal installments on March 15, 1944, and March 15, 1945.

Chairman Walter F. George, D., Ga., of the senate finance committee, who first proposed the 75 per cent forgiveness plan, said he saw no reason why President Roosevelt would veto the conference committee compromise. Mr. Roosevelt has expressed his disapproval of the flat cancellation principle.

"I don't know what Mr. Roosevelt will do," George said, "but I can see no reason why he would not sign it. The need for pay-as-you-go legislation is imperative and I believe the president recognizes that."

George said that the senate probably would not consider the conference report before Wednesday or Thursday because of the precedence on the calendar of reciprocal trade agreements legislation.

Treasury estimates indicate the compromise proposal will net the government $3,000,000,000 more in fiscal 1944 than the present tax law.

The legislation does not alter the necessity of all taxpayers making their regular June 15 tax installment as stipulated under existing law.

U. S. FLAG FLIES ON ATTU AGAIN AS JAPS YIELD

Tokyo Admits Loss of Key To Aleutians; Yanks Wipe Out Foe.

serted that "Japanese troops launched the final attack on Attu after shouting 'banzai' for the emperor and making bows toward the imperial palace in Tokyo." The broadcast told of gaps developing in Japanese ranks until "only a few more than 100 men remained and they sent a message to Tokyo 'remembering the honor of Japanese soldiers, we are going into the fight and only death can take our weapons out of our hands'."

It was indicated that the enemy force was far greater than the "few more than 100" mentioned by Tokyo, for the navy declared "preliminary reports indicate the Japanese casualties were high."

Two offensive courses now appear open to the Americans in the north Pacific — to recapture Kiska where the enemy established his largest Aleutian base, or to drive toward the west and the Japanese homeland.

Kiska is flanked on the west by Attu and on the southwest by American forces on Amchitka, only 70 miles away.

U. S. Planes Pace Jap Roll-Back In China

CHUNGKING — (AP) — Paced by American bombers that smashed Japanese bases east of Tungting lake, central Chinese army units have thrown back the Japanese with heavy losses south of Ichang and are on the offensive in other sectors of the Yangtze valley path to Chungking, it was announced today.

Yuyangkwan, 35 miles south of Ichang, was recaptured Saturday by two other Chinese units and the Japanese, who suffered 2,000 casualties, retreated toward Niehchicho closely pursued by the victors, a Chinese communique said. The capture of Changyang, only 12 miles below Ichang, was said to be imminent.

Another Japanese retreat west of Sinan was forced by the Chinese Friday night, Chinese headquarters said, while heavy losses were inflicted on the Japanese in at least three other sectors of which the Tungting lake valley is a center.

Wewak Hit With 13 Tons of Bombs

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA — (AP) — Thirteen tons of bombs dropped on Japanese airdromes in the Wewak, New Guinea, region Sunday, set off explosions that continued for ten minutes and started numerous fires in fuel dumps and airplane dispersal areas.

The raid, against the Boram and Wewa airdromes, was made by Flying Fortresses just before dawn. It was the second heavy attack in that area in three days.

FDR Asks Funds To Hunt For New Oil, Gas Fields

WASHINGTON — (INS) — President Roosevelt today has asked the senate appropriations committee to increase the proposed appropriations for investigations to discover new sources of oil and natural gas.

In a supplemental budget he requested that a special fund be lifted from $887,500 to $1,187,500.

"During the last three years new oil fields discovered have fallen so far short of compensating for consumption that the question of supplies is rapidly becoming more and more serious, and there is urgent need for the geological survey to provide the basic geologic data which is a prerequisite to telligent exploration for oil and gas," said an accompanying budget bureau letter.

pressed accidentally, causing the car to leap forward, Schad said.

Darling's death was caused by a punctured artery in the pelvic region which caused him to lose a large quantity of blood before he could be removed to the hospital, his physician explained. Joseph DeYarman, bookkeeper in the R. O. Darling and Son offices, gave blood for a transfusion and other friends were at the hospital ready to offer blood in an attempt to save the injured man's life.

Darling had been affiliated with his father in the contracting business since he was a small boy.

He was born in Perrysville and came to Mansfield with his parents in 1922.

He was a member of the Methodist church of Perrysville, Frank H. Marquis lodge No. 690, F. and A. M., the Junior Order, United American Mechanics, the Chamber of Commerce, the Junior Association of Commerce, the Cooperative club and the Richland County Minutemen's association.

Besides his wife, daughter and parents, he is survived by a sister, Mrs. Nathan Heston of Lucas.

Funeral services will be conducted at the Finefrock funeral home at 3:30 p. m. Thursday. The body will be placed in the Mansfield mausoleum.

THEATERS

Mickey Makes Good.

Since he came to Hollywood, Mickey Rooney has been one of the top paid actors in the business. In 1941, he was the champion box office attraction. But many critics have panned Mickey and labeled him a number one "ham." They declared that his performances in the Hardy family series were not the type that should establish him as the nation's top drawing card. But have climed on the bandwagon and are hailing his performance in "The Human Comedy" as tops. The picture is now at the Ohio.

Laurel and Hardy.

The situation is well in hand. Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy are now air-raid wardens. The popular comedians, who teamed up in 1924, come to the screen of the Madison Wednesday in their new picture, "Air Raid Wardens." The comedy partners are turned down by the armed forces, and so, feeling they should be doing some patriotic job, become air raid wardens. All goes well until they try to enforce a black-out merely to show their authority. They are fired, but emerge as public heroes when they uncover a nest of saboteurs. Other picture at the Madison is the mystery, "The Man In the Trunk."

Rotund Singer.

Featured in Count Basie's orchestra, currently appearing in "Hit Parade of 1943," now at the Park, is rotund James Rushing, whose manner of handling blues tunes is a favorite with music fans from coast to coast. "Little" Jimmy tips the scales at 250, and his vocals are said to be as solid as his weight. Two other name bands, besides Basie's, are also seen in the Park attraction. They are the Freddy Martin's and Ray McKinley's. "The Spirit of Stanford," is the co-attraction.

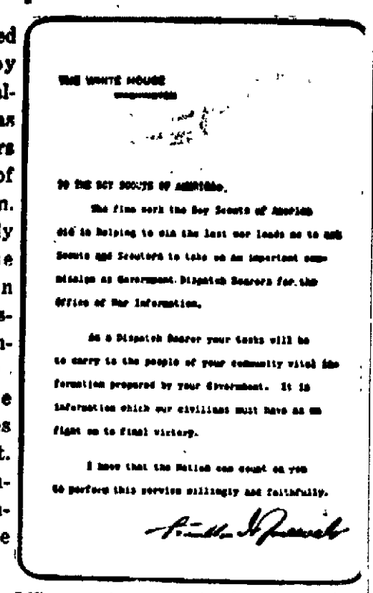
COUNTERSIGNED BY SCOUTMASTER

Several hundred thousand Boy Scouts have already qualified as Dispatch Bearers for the Office of War Information. They are proudly carrying these identification cards as they distribute vital information prepared by the United States Government. They will continue this assignment for the duration.



THE WHITE HOUSE
TO THE BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA:
The fine work the Boy Scouts of America did in helping to win the last war leads me to ask Scouts and Scouters to take on an important commission as Government Dispatch Bearers for the Office of War Information.
As a Dispatch Bearer your tasks will be to carry to the people of your community vital information prepared by your Government. It is information which our civilians must have as we fight on to final victory.
I know that the Nation can count on you to perform this service willingly and faithfully.

"On my honor, I will do my best to do my duty to God and my country." That's the official Boy Scout motto and Mansfield scouts are living up to it. Twenty scouts from Troops 2 and 20 have been designated as special dispatch bearers for the Office of War Information. So far, they have distributed posters which advertised the sale of war bonds, Red Cross donations, and the victory garden program, and they will also deliver future OWI releases. The scouts are not compensated in any way for this work. Each scout carries a dispatch bearer identification card, as shown above. F. L. Culp, scoutmaster of Troop 2, and O. E. Chronister, scoutmaster of Troop 20, serve as advisors to the 20 boys.

Marine Corps To Train Dogs As Sentry Aids

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — Man's best friend—the dog—is proving himself a better friend than ever.

Following the lead of the Army, a Marine Corps unit in Hawaii has undertaken a "Dogs for Defense" program, designed to provide the Leathernecks with both dog trainers and sentry dogs. The Marine Corps' program is being developed in co-operation with the Army, whose "Defense Dogs" program already is well established and proving of vital importance.

Sentry dogs are selected for alertness, obedience, and aggressiveness. Their three-month intensive training period stresses immediate obedience to commands.

The final phase of their training for actual war service includes a two-week period in which both dog and individual marine sentry become acquainted with each other. The sentry is instructed in proper handling and proper commands, and the dog is taught to obey his particular master. Great Danes, German shepherds, and airdales have been found to be the breeds most adaptable for war work.

FARM LEADERS CHALLENGE OPA SUBSIDY PROGRAM AS NEEDLESS

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Announcement that the Office of Price Administration intends to subsidize food prices, starting with butter tomorrow, brought a prompt challenge from congressional farm leaders today.

The government program, as explained by agriculture department officials, is designed to build up surplus stocks of farm commodities during period of heavy production. The surplus then would be used during "lean" periods.

Thus, agriculture spokesmen said, the administration hopes to accumulate stocks which will allow the supply of butter and other foods to flow into essential civilian markets in addition to furnishing military demands.

The five cents a pound subsidy for butter, and subsequent rollback prices on other foods, will be paid out of Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds.

Senator Smith (D-S. C.), chairman of the senate agriculture committee, and Rep. Fulmer (D-S. C.) of the house agriculture committee, were quick to ridicule the subsidy plan.

Smith, an outspoken foe of the administration's farm policies, said his committee would consider tomorrow or Wednesday a proposal to forbid subsidy payments without specific congressional authority.

Fulmer termed subsidy "ridiculous" and needless.

2-INCH RAIN POURS ON CITY

Two Storms Flood Streets and Subway; Elyria Hit By Big Rain; Crops Damaged.

Elyria and Seville—also suffered heavily from near-cloudbursts.

A three-hour downpour at Elyria yesterday flooded several streets and homes and caused minor property damage. Another rainstorm of cloudburst proportions provided Seville with its worst flood in eight years and ruined acres of celery crops.

Chippewa and Hubbard creeks at Seville overflowed onto three blocks of Main street and inundated many cellars and garages.

The torrent threatened to extinguish fires in the boiler room at Elyria Memorial hospital until a fire department pumper was used to check the rising water.

Flash floods yesterday in Wisconsin and western Michigan cost at least one life and crippled transportation and industries today, adding further damage to the flood-swept midwest.

St. Joseph, Mich., suffered the brunt of the flash flood. A washout under the main line of the Pere Marquette railroad derailed five loaded freight cars, and wrecking crews labored to reestablish the right-of-way. Freight traffic was at a standstill in the area while passenger trains were rerouted around the town.

In Wisconsin, flash floods sent Beaver creek swirling into Sparta, causing an estimated $500,000 damage. One man whose trailer home was swept away by the flood, was reported missing.

Military police under Maj. H. R. Beigel were sent into Sparta to help evacuate residents marooned in downtown apartments, and Red Cross units set up emergency stations in the city.

N THE CAPITAL-- By Raymond Clapper

CICHOLM—(By Wireless)—The reaction here Moscow's dissolution of the Third Internae has been slow and guarded. Berlin dises to Swedish newspapers take the line that velt and Churchill have given Stalin a free in Europe in return. Swedish comment is Stalin's action was a shrewd tactical move, helpful in solidifying the Allies.

But Sweden's fear of Russia is not ideological, as ours is. It is geographical — the fear of a strong power in the east which, with Germany on the other side, would catch her in a vise. A nationalist Russia, following the old czarist policies, would be more of a menace to Sweden than communism. Hence the Swedish press emphasizes that Stalin is returning to the Pan-Slavic hyapper onal ideals of Czarist Russia, which does an that if Russia were a threat it is so no provincial paper comments that more conproofs are needed to make small states mmediate neighborhood of the Soviet Union this is something more than an opporand temporary maneuver. Other comment es that this action makes Russia a much ally, but warns that it is probable the rn will return, although much better Liberal papers point out that Moscow's will promote collaboration between Russia Anglo-Saxon powers, which will probably beneficial to Swedish interests. Those are n lines of comment here.

merica our fear of Russia is not geographiideological. We regard the communistic as a menace to capitalism, and we have always been jittery about it. I never thought there was much sense in such jitters, but the popularity of the Dies committee shows that such anxiety has existed.

There is not much of that in Sweden. The communists are a small element here. Sweden has elaborate social service, yet it is an extremely conservative country in the sense that the Social Democrats, who are in a majority, are more nearly like American Federation of Labor trade-unionists. Sweden is about as radical as William Green.

The point is that legitimate trade unions here have enormous power and prestige. Everybody is well taken care of—except unskilled labor, such as forest workers.

Private capitalism is deeply entrenched in Sweden. Even the co-operatives, which are gigantic and powerful economically, consider themselves an ally of private enterprise against state encroachment.

Fear of Russia exists in the upper controlling groups—the bankers, capitalists and court circles—but mainly it is fear of Russia as a neighbor on the east, not as a menace to the Swedish system of government.

Rising figures in the Social Democratic party here are getting away from the old phobia regarding Russia, and are looking upon her as a great potential outlet for trade. That growing outlook tends somewhat to modify the traditional fear of the big neighbor to the east.

Nevertheless, there is some apprehension lest closer collaboration with the Anglo-American combination means that Russia will become stronger, which would not be a welcome development for Sweden, as many here see it.

In the broad view, Stalin's move is bound to have a favorable reaction, because it is impossible to make the democratic idea work when the opposition take orders from a foreign capital as the communists have done.

AIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

RANCISCO, Cal.—Today I start my reply he open letter received and published the y, giving some assertations and arguments h Curran, the president of the National union, which follows the Communist party ll matters and controls shipping on our t.

k it is unnecessary to go into the question Curran, himself, asked for draft defere controls this union absolutely. He is the union, and when the union asked that Curran be deferred so that he could continue to run it, that was a case of Curran the union asking a pass for Curran, the individual, and the red-hot second-fronter, unless you want to believe his own statement that he told nobody but his secretary that he had been called up for physical examination and was absent from New York in another port, helping to man er some new ships, when the redeferment was presented. The suggestion could have been done without his knowlminiscent of pious old Dan Tobin's great ul surprise when his executive committee amsters' union, without consulting him, set aside $100,000 to buy him a winter he luxurious colony of AFL unioneers of ach, and to maintain it for him as long s. Mr. Tobin, after solemn deliberation, at "enemies of labor" would misinterpret ssion of appreciation of his services and turned down the gift, but he may have , in a similar case, Jimmy Petrillo, the e musicians, who had received a $50,000 love gift from his "boys" in Chicago, d to pay income tax on the value of the the ground that, as absolute controller nion's affairs, he had given himself the that the $50,000 therefore represented says his board felt that the job "of e merchant ships manned" required his shore, and the answer to that is that States must be in one hell of a fix in f the most dangerous war in our history rnment can't handle the job of manning an merchant marine and training new sailors and therefore must farm it out to a man who damned this war as a capitalistic conspiracy against the working people until Hitler attacked Russia.

If you think he is bashful, consider the fact that on March 12, this year, the union notified the state department that it would "not be a party to carrying vital materials to Franco Spain which can and will be utilized to bolster the Nazi war machine." Later, I believe, the union hedged, saying this did not mean that Curran would refuse to let union men sail to Spain and thus dictate foreign policy to the United States government but what does that resolution mean to you?

I can't decide, but neither can Curran, whether it is smart or foolish to let Franco have a little stuff in the hope of keeping him friendly. Sometimes nations have to make queer trades in war and I call attention to the fact that Curran's union has taken no similar interest in the state of relations between Russia and Japan which are not at war with each other and thus may be presumed to be carrying on trade in things which Russia needs to shoot at the Germans and Japan needs to shoot at us, among others. That seems to be the way things must be in such a complicated line-up.

Curran accused me of certain omissions in previous discussions of his union and dragged in a lot of issues which had nothing to do with the case but which I will undertake to answer later. But he said nothing at all about drunkenness and indiscipline among civilian sailors and was very meager in his details about the disparity in pay which has created serious unpleasantness among some of the enlisted men of the navy and their officers who serve the guns aboard the same ships and run exactly the same risks. I will go into these matters, too, when I get around to it, but when I cite a case I will first make sure what union has jurisdiction aboard and not make the mistake of technical libel in proving some acts of outrageous conduct by naming the wrong organization.

All these ships keep logs and they are supposed to be filed with the shipping commissioner in each American port and some of the episodes in them would curl your hair, although I do not mean to create an impression that the merchant sailors, as a group, are bad actors. Nevertheless, too many of them are drunks and habitual trouble-makers who get away with it because they have unions to protect them.

COMES IN ON WING, PRAYER

Bullet-Riddled Fortress Makes Safe Return From Bremen Raid.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Tech Sgt. Leland J. Kessler, of Canton, O., was the top turret gunner aboard the Flying Fortress "Little Savage" which made a miraculous return to its English base after a raid on the Focke-Wulf airplane factories at Bremen, Germany, the war department disclosed tonight.

The Big B-17 literally came home "on a wing and a prayer," with the bom-bay doors hanging open and all hands holding on safely. When it landed, two engines were out of commission, the main rudder spar was hit, the top turret guns—Sergeant Kessler's—were out of action and the wings and fuselage were riddled with bulelt holes.

Almost immediately after the Fortress dropped its load, a Messerrschmitt 109 dived on the bomber to put its No. 1 engine out of action. The "Little Savage" lost speed and dropped out of formation. Then 18 or 20 German fighters moved in for the kill.

A 20 m.m. shell smashed into the top turret, putting those guns out of action. Then another shell crippled the No. 2 engine, and another hammered on the main wing spar, springing open the bomb-bay doors. The main rudder was hit, but continued to function.

Finally, flying low, the "Little Savage" eluded pursuers and skimmed across the English Channel to its base.

ATTEND RITES FOR HOMBERGER

Ohio Postmasters Arrive For Funeral Of Mansfield Official.

A large delegation of Ohio postmasters, members of the Ohio State Postmasters' association, began arriving in Mansfield early today, to attend funeral services for Postmaster Herman E. Homberger, who died Friday morning after suffering a stroke.

Services were to be conducted at 3.30 p. m. today at First Presbyterian church by Rev. D. N. Roller, pastor. Interment was to be in the Homberger mausoleum in Mansfield cemetery.

They live in Akron now and the card on their mailbox says Mr. and Mrs. Fred Caston, but a great many Mansfielders remember them as Freddie Caston and Mildred Taylor when they both went to school here. They have a four-year-old daughter, Cynthia. The other evening her mother warned Cynthia that if she went outdoors to romp after dinner her daddy would spank her. The curly-haired youngster considered the situation for a while, then tip-toed to the closet and got her coat. She went up to her father and said serenely: "I'm going out to play now, daddy. You can spank me when I come in." Caston managed to keep a straight face, but he didn't have the heart to do any spanking, then or later.

Three Mansfielders today were awarded citations by the War Production board for increasing industrial efficiency. J. M. Carr and I. J. May, both Westinghouse employes, were cited for developing a new heat salvage method for bent warped condenser plates used in radio assemblies. Joe Rabel, also a Westinghouse employe, suggested a low temperature salt bath to obtain proper hardness for the band assembled to the armor piercing shot manufactured at the plant. His idea eliminated trucking and pickling processes formerly required.

Major Ralph E Moorhead, 29 Western avenue, was home on leave from Atlanta, Ga., today arriving about the same time as his second lieutenant son, Robert W. Moorhead arrived home. Lieut. Moorhead just received his commission in the quartermaster corps., after officers training at Camp Lee, Va. He will report for duty at San Antonio, Tex.

ALL'S HARMONY AS FOOD MEET NEARS ITS END

Everyone Agrees on Everything Including Lots of Drinks, at Hot Springs.

(By International News Service)

HOT SPRINGS, Va.—The first international food conference today provided the Axis with a first-class headache by moving swiftly to a finale brightly lit with peace and harmony among the delegation of the 45 united and associated nations.

As the combined committees met to approve the report of section three on distribution and promised to complete the entire work of the conference not later than Wednesday, nothing but good-will-toward-fellow-man was apparent in the atmosphere.

Wednesday will probably be left open to take care of last-minute odds and ends and the plenary session closing the historic inter-Allied parley is scheduled for Thursday.

Breaking all known records, the international meeting comes to an end with every one in agreement and on speaking terms. No sound of battle has issued from committee sessions and the broad palm-lined corridors of the luxurious Homestead hotel have been as innocent of intrigue as their dignified white pillars.

The few minor skirmishes enlivening various confabs have been of a technical nature, according to those present and grew only out of the extreme sincerity of the conference to tackle the vast and complex problem of post war food production and distribution from the most efficient angle. Even the bell-boys who have developed a keen nose for trouble and intrigue after many years experience at this fashionable resort, haven't been able to scrape up anything remotely important in the way of gossip.

Carrying the smooth politeness of diplomatic procedure one step farther, most of the delegations have cocktailed, wined and dined each other to the hilt. No single evening has been without its international party both in dining room and in private sitting rooms.

Even the aloof and taciturn Russians have recently blossomed socially and hosted some of the conference's liveliest and most widely attended gatherings.

The party schedule was more filled than ever as staff members began drifting outward and homeward with their chores over and the end of the conference just over the next rise. Already departed are some members of the Canadian and the United Kingdom delegations. More are leaving tonight.

LOCATE AUTO

Police Find One Stolen Car, Search For Another.

Mansfield police recovered a stolen car in the city Sunday and were asked today to help locate another reported stolen last night from the former Mayfair inn west of Mansfield.

A 17-year-old Orrville, O., youth was taken into custody early yesterday by police as he started the wrong way around Central park at Diamond street. He admitted taking a car owned by R. W. Fehr of Galion from that city, officers said, and was turned over to Galion police.

An "obliging" thief left another car in its place when he stole an automobile belonging to Joseph Hackman, an employe at the Parsel air depot near Shelby, from the Mayfair inn building, now used as housing quarters for air supply depot workers, it was reported today to Deputy Sheriff G. C Humphrey

Humphrey said the stolen car had Pennsylvania tags and the one left in its place apparently had been stolen from Wooster.

RAF SINKS FIVE NAZI U-BOATS

Takes Toll in Sea-Air Battles Over 10 Days.

LONDON —(AP)— At least five Axis submarines have been blasted to the Atlantic ocean's depths by RAF planes in weird air-sea battles and more of the U-boat pack may have been added to the toll in a 10-day period, the British air ministry has announced.

Planes of the coastal command fought Adolf Hitler's sea wolves with depth bombs and withstood lively gunfire from the submarines' artillery to sink the U-boats, one west of Iceland, one south of Iceland, and three near the Bay of Biscay, it was announced yesterday.

A German communique apparently referring to the same action asserted five British speedboats were sunk and two crippled.

Babies Without Milk As Drivers Defy ODT Order

NEW YORK —(U.P.)—Thousands of infants were without fresh milk today as members of the Milk Wagon Drivers' union (AFL) continued to defy an office of defense transportation order which would require them to double their loads to stores, hotels and restaurants.

Mayor F. H. LaGuardia appealed to the drivers to refrain from "fighting the government" and return to work as William H. Davis, chairman of the War Labor Board said settlement of the dispute over the ODT skip-a-day delivery order was up to the metropolitan milk distributors commission.

Ralph T. Seward, chairman of the commission, indicated the next move was up to the union, which contends the order would force 2,000 to 3,000 men out of work.

Deliveries to homes continued on regular schedule, but wholesale deliveries were not made yesterday, Edward O. Mather, executive director of the Milk Dealers' association said.

to lie behind the current Nazi propaganda drive to stop the pulverizing Allied air bombardment. Allied quarters believe the Germans really have little hope of halting the air raids.

The Nazi propaganda drive follows two main channels—claims through third parties that civilians are being killed wantonly and statements that the Allies rather than Germany initiated air bombardment.

friends," Rev. Hagelbarger said. "Life comes to its fullest bloom in personal relations. From our friends we learn what they have found from this strange adventure, life."

Rev. Hagelbarger told the seniors how to find a happy and successful life. "Find the way God is marching in the next 50 years and march with him.

The speaker urged the graduates to place undivided faith in God. "Many of you boys—indeed most of you—will soon enter the armed forces of your country. God is with our boys wherever they may be and he will be with you wherever you may be."

"If God is not with us in this supreme crisis, he will not be very real in any lesser crisis.

"You graduates are entering a world filled with hardships and sorrow. But it is an interesting world, a world filled with many possibilities. It is your job to make the most of these possibilities."

Rev. Hagelbarger's talk was preceded by the invocation by Rev. Martin W. Wappner, Ohio State Reformatory chaplain.

Rev. A. J. Payne, pastor of Shiloh Baptist church, gave the scripture reading.

ized will be open to all parks which can organize their own volunteer workers. According to present plans if it is possible the playgrounds will open June 14 and remain open through the school vacation period.

The Council of Community Fund Agencies, as was decided at an earlier meeting of that group, will take on the responsibility of training the volunteers workers prior to the opening of the playgrounds.

For three years the playgrounds have been closed since there has been no money to support them. A levy passed in 1928 and originally planned to provide funds for five years was stretched to last for 11 years or until 1939. Since that time the playgrounds have operated spasmodically until the present wartime crisis brought public attention back to the need for some sort of organized activities for the children during the summer, Dent explained.

SET UP UNITED FRENCH RULE

DeGaulle and Giraud Establish Provisional Government In Algiers Meeting.

mittee and not recognized by the United States and Britain as the government of France, the members will head ministries similar to those of a government. Formation of the government itself will come, according to announced plan, after an Allied victory frees all the French empire and the French people are free to choose their leaders.

De Gaulle, leader of the Fighting French, arrived in Algeria yesterday in an American plane to a thunderous ovation from the public to begin the unity conference with Giraud, North African military and civil comamnder.

Shortly after De Gaulle's arrival, the Berlin radio said French warships at Alexandria, immobilized since the fall of France almost three years ago, had come under the Allied banner. This was confirmed today by authoritative London sources.

The 20,000-ton battleship Lorraine, the heavy cruisers Duquesne, Tourville and Souffren, the light cruiser Duguay-Trouin, three destroyers and a submarine were at Alexandria.

(The Nazi-controlled Paris radio said the Alexandria fleet would go to New York to join the 35,000-ton French battleship Richelieu, which sailed there from Dakar, for refitting.)

"The means of achieving unity, De Gaulle told newsmen, "is the immediate establishment of a general French power here to decide all things in the conduct of the war in all parts of the French empire freed from the enemy yoke."

There was at least an outward atmosphere of conciliation as Giraud shook hands with De Gaulle at a remote airfield. "This is no time for speeches, but for action for France," Giraud said.

It was announced yesterday that Gen. Alphonse Georges, 67-year-old commander of all French armies on the western front at the beginning of the war, had arrived to offer his services to Giraud after escaping from his German-occupied homeland.

WELLES WANTS WORLD COURT

Says International Police Force Also Necessary To Preserve Peace.

(By United Press)

DURHAM, N. C.—Under Secretary of State Sumner Welles declared today that a world court to settle disputes among nations and an international police force to keep the peace must be established at the end of the war if humanity is to be spared a repetition of the present conflict.

Speaking at the commencement exercises of the North Carolina College for Negroes, Welles used the strongest language of any administration spokesman yet to describe the "cardinal principles" which he said must be established to preserve peace.

The principles which he laid down were:

"There must be, through internal agreement, a combination of armed forces made available by the powers which are prepared to do so, which may be used regionally or on a broader scale, and which can, and will, prevent aggression, render international conflict impossible, and, in general, see to it that the peace of the world is maintained inviolate.

"An international tribunal to which international controversies can be referred, and in which international confidence can be safely placed.

"An efficient international method for the outlawing of certain kinds of armaments, and for the inspection of all national armaments."

The policy of isolationism, Welles said, has failed—"utterly and miserably."

MINE STOPPAGE LOOMING AGAIN

Walkout Due at Midnight If Lewis Fails To Extend Truce; Talks Go on.

negotiations were resumed here after they broke down in New York and the War Labor Board intervened.

The question of how much a miner is to be paid for his traveling time from the moment he enters the mine until he comes out—portal-to-portal—still was the issue about which most of the argument centered. The operators have agreed to make some concessions, but apparently not enough to satisfy Lewis and his collaborators.

Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, who now is running the mines for the government, is expected to step in again and ask for a further extension of the truce if Lewis does not take the initiative and order one. The original contract expired March 31.

The United Mine Workers' policy committee was ready to consider any agreement reached. A spokesman said yesterday that the committee might meet today.

The truce did not concern the War Labor Board. A board spokesman indicated the body had no thought of asking Lewis to renew the truce. The WLB, he indicated, "does not make truces and does not worry about expiration dates."

The cost involved in any substantial concession on portal-to-portal pay has concerned the operators because they fear they could not obtain permission from the Office of Price Administration to offset the increased cost of production.

The UMW's original portal-to-portal demand was for $2 a day on the basis of an estimated 90 minutes of travel time in the mine at time and a half rates. The operators suggested 80 cents a day on the basis of 48 minutes travel time at straight rates.

Lewis has given no sign whether he will respect the WLB's demand of May 25 that the negotiators report back to the board within 15 days.
